McCarty's election petition ruled invalid

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

A hearing was held on the morning of Feb. 5 before the Municipal Officers Electoral Board regarding the petition that was filed by Robert McCarty and subsequently challenged by members of the Antioch First Party.

The objectors included the three candidates seeking positions as trustees of the village: Tom Baba, Ken Karasek and Dorothy Larson who alleged McCarty's petition had many suspect signatures and other irregularities making him unqualified to appear on the ballot in the April 3 consolidated election. McCarty's attorney Robert Long wanted the issue dismissed and stated his client had been denied due process. He contended that because notification of the challenge wasn't received until 5:30 p.m. on Feb. 2, nearly 30 hours beyond what is stated under 10-10 of the election code, his client did not have access to counsel or to the public offices where documents in his defense could be obtained.

Additionally, Long thought it improper to have Mayor Marilyn Shineflug on the electoral board though she didn't actively participate because she is part of the Antioch First Party. Trustee Dorothy Larson later explained, "State statute required her to be there because the electoral board is typically made up of the village clerk , a senior trustee and the mayor." Candi Rowe is the village clerk and Ron Cunningham is the senior trustee on the board of directors of the Village of Antioch.

According to the transcript of the proceedings, village attorney Ken Clark said, "The only thing that I would say that's going to be different in the rules is that I will be acting as the hearing officer; but in order to do that, I will need a motion..." He further indicated that the mayor would only vote in the event of a tie, and then she would have to decide if she wanted to vote or not.

After listening to arguments brought forth my the objectors attorney Keri-Lyn Krafthefer that cited other cases as precedence, the board voted not to grant Long's motion to dismiss. Krafthefer offered to continue the hearing to allow the respondents more time to prepare.

McCarty and Long left the hearing at this point, and the case continued on without them. Selected signatures were reviewed for things such as "signer's signature not genuine," "signer not registered at address shown," "signer resides outside district" among others. In the first category, the electoral board voted to accept two affidavits from individuals stating their names and addresses were fraudulently placed on McCarty's petition.

The two members of the electoral board voted that 54 signatures were not valid, leaving 51. A minimum of 62 signatures are need for a candidate to be placed on the ballot. Subsequently, the electoral board voted to request the Lake County clerk to remove McCarty's name from the ballot.

In a written response, McCarty announced "...he has decided not to embroil the Village in litigation over his nomination, despite the election board being poisoned by gross irregularities brought about by the Machiavellian machinations of Mayor

Antioch Community High School students make their mark on the world through music

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Two Antioch Community High School students have been selected to travel Europe and perform with the Spirit of America national honor band. Mike Markovics, a student from Lindenhurst, will be making his third trip with the band this summer, and takes pride in helping Mike Lencioni, a fellow student from Antioch, prepare for an adventure Markovics said is "one of the greatest experiences ever."

Markovics had made a trip with the marching band to Illinois State University a couple of years ago, and received a brochure in the mail about Spirit of America shortly after his return. "If you let them know you're interested, you get a giant application in the mail that requires recommendations from various teachers and band instructors," said Markovics. "The teachers mail their part of the application back separately, so you don't see what they say about you."

It's no small task to be selected as part of the Spirit of America band. According to the brochure, those who are accepted are applicants with the following characteristics: are strong performers; are mature and can handle themselves with minimum supervision; are self-disciplined and well behaved; have outstanding attitude and character; and exemplify the best of American youth.

After spending an intensive five days of preparation at the State University of West Georgia in the Atlanta area, the band, made up of about 150 members between the mid-teens and early 20s from across the United States, travels to the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, France, Germany, Switzerland, Liechtenstein and Austria (though not necessarily in that order) performing nearly a dozen concerts.

"I like the concerts in the small towns where we play for three or

Deercrest lawsuit against Lake County, Glick, Village of Antioch back in court

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

The case filed by Otto Sprenger and the limited liability company (LLC) Deercrest against the Village of Antioch, Lake County and Kenneth Glick on Sept. 6, 2000 will go back before Judge Wallace Dunn on Feb. 13. It had been anticipated that Dunn would rule on the motions submitted by both plaintiffs and defendants last November, but the judge asked that the plaintiff's suit be amended and re-filed.

The objective of the suit filed by Sprenger and Deercrest is to have the Northeast Sewerage System attach to the Sprenger/Deercrest property so that the land can developed under the PUD (planned unit development) approved by the Village of Antioch.

Last fall, Lake County and Glick sought to have the case dismissed. Their petitions, in short, said they were under no obligation to grant (Glick) and obtain (Lake County) easements on the Glick property where the county "stubbed" its installation of the sewerage system. The property in question lies between the stubbed sewerage system and the Deercrest property.

According to Marc Neuerman, a participant in Deercrest, LLC, the Lake Forest Preserves has closed on the property purchased from Glick. "They bought the property with full knowledge of our lawsuit," said Neuerman, who added the entity had been provided with a "lis pendens" (notification of a pending lawsuit) back in September. "Additionally, all county board members also serve on the Forest Preserve board," he said.

Since November, the plaintiffs

The New Year's resolution battle has been lost

JINGLE FROM PRINGLE

Lynn Pringle

I don't normally attempt to uphold any New Year's resolutions, but this year, to maintain my sanity, I have vowed not to wash my kitchen floor until sometime in June, and maybe not even then. It seems I no sooner have the last swipe of tile done when the garage door will open and the kids come bounding in with three of their friends and all the mud they can pack onto the bottom of their boots to deposit on my freshly washed surface. I try to take it all in stride and once they have shed their soaking outerwear, and have finished spilling their snack time juice, I once again turn my mop onto the latest of slop.

No sooner are the newly formed puddles cleaned up, then the sound of a barking dog finds me at the back door letting in a four-pawed critter. Even after wiping each oversized furry foot, they never seem to completely be rid of mud and little bits of sand. As the dog bounds across the kitchen, leaving a trail of footprints in his wake and throwing fur in every direction, in search of the household children, two more playmates show up at the door looking for some outdoor companions.

The kids come running from all over the house to bundle up and return outside amidst piles of snow and slush. With them gone, the floor remains somewhat dry until grandpa arrives for his daily visit. He lives only one very long, very mucky gravel driveway away, and of course he walks over.

He enters the house, removes his hat and mittens, wipes his glasses with his handkerchief, then proceeds a traipse through my kitchen over to the front door to watch the children sledding down the hill. What a silly question—of course he doesn't have to remove his boots. Sometime in the course of his visit he will look down and see himself standing in a puddle of slush and remark, "Did I do that?" He then trudges over to the counter, creating a river of goo, brags one little paper towel and lays it over his mess—this is about equivalent to trying to soak up the Atlantic Ocean with an ordinary paper napkin. After munching a couple of cookies and checking that all is well, grandpa retreats back up to his squeaky clean kitchen floor and I bet money his boots are tucked safely on the mat right outside the door leading into his house from the garage, never setting foot in his kitchen.

The children return after their sledding escapade, splattering gunk every which way, and once again the floor resembles a cesspool. Even they squeal as their sock-clad feet try to avoid the puddles that they have created. The dog runs in from the living room to greet the kids and slips on the wet floor, landing on his side and slides into the laundry room. "Oh mom, Simba's fur just wiped up all the water that was on the floor." Oh yea, that is the one thing I like even better than a dirty kitchen floor, the smell of wet dog.

And so goes another "Jingle from Pringle."

Readers with information for "Jingle from Pringle" should call Lynn Pringle at 395-6364.

PTO to host family rummage sale Feb. 24

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Members of the community are invited to participate in the Antioch Upper Grade School's (AUGS) first family flea fest rummage sale being hosted by the PTO and held on Feb. 24 from 9 a.m.-noon.

The school's principal Eric Skoog said, "It's not just for the families of students at our school. Community members can reserve table space, and take the opportunity to sell crafts or as one of the planners Gina Nowak says, 'clean out closets and garages before spring.'"

Those choosing to reserve table space will pay a nominal fee for the space, and keep all of the profits from the items they sell. Additionally, there will be a donation table for items whose sale will benefit the school and a swap table where items can be exchanged for one another.

"This is a pilot program," said Skoog. "We are hoping it will be successful. The PTO has been looking for a fundraiser that would benefit both the school and the community, and we're hoping we've found it."

Admission is $1 per person, or $.50 for those bringing a non-perishable food item for the Antioch Food Pantry. "We're preparing for our March food drive by collecting some items now," said Skoog.

In addition to selling and swapping items, there will be food and fun, and AUGS Spirit wear will be for sale.

To reserve table space or for donation information, call Nowak at 838-1910.

Electronic filing encouraged

Revenue Director Glen Bower, Comptroller Dan Hynes, and State Treasurer Judy Baar Topinka today urged taxpayers to join the 1.1 million who embraced electronic commerce to file their tax returns last year.

Hynes and Bower said that payment of income tax refunds in "about one week" to citizens who both file their taxes electronically and have their refunds direct deposited gives taxpayers a reason to use electronic filing.

Topinka and Bower announced further expansions of the Treasurer's credit card program that 4,400 taxpayers used to pay $1.7 million in taxes last year.

The three state officials said that besides faster refunds, electronic commerce offers taxpayers convenience, confirmation of filing and payment, and improved accuracy.

Controller Hynes noted that his office processed more than 260,000 refunds via direct deposit last year, twice as many as the previous year. Even more growth is anticipated this year when paper filers can use direct deposit.

"I strongly urge all eligible taxpayers to use electronic filing and direct deposit," Hynes said. "That option allows for the fastest and most efficient turnarounds for refunds. Direct deposit is the most secure and cost-effective means of distributing refunds."

Comptroller Hynes said that while only taxpayers who use both electronic filing and direct deposit will enjoy the approximately seven-day turn around for refunds, taxpayers who only use direct deposit will also see a benefit. " The money belongs to taxpayers," said Hynes. "It's our job to put it in their hands as quickly and as safely as possible."

Treasurer Topinka said that the expansion of the credit card payment program to include estimated payments and previous year's taxes and the offering of an Internet payment option added convenience to taxpayers: "Although taxes are never fun, these initiative offer a faster, easier way to pay them."

"We are always looking for ways to improve service using modern technology, and the Internet offers us some great options," Topinka said.

Director Bower urged taxpayers to check their tax booklets, talk to their tax professionals, or visit the department's web site at www.revenue.state.il.us to select an electronic filing method from among the four available: 1) I-File - free Internet filing through the department's web site open to 4.3 million taxpayers, twice as many as last year. 1)TeleFile - free filing by touch-tone telephone, available to 2.3 million taxpayers, three times as many as last year. TeleFilers must complete the worksheet in their tax booklets before calling. 1)e-File - filing through a tax professional, available to 5 million, or 1)Retail software - filing on-line through a commercial tax preparation package like Turbo Tax or Tax Cut, available to 5 million taxpayers.

All electronic filing methods provide a confirmation of filing, include edits that eliminate math errors, and several offer filing from home at their convenience.

"Last year 260,000 taxpayers received their refunds in a week by filing electronically and using direct deposit," Bower said. "I urge to try electronic filing this year."

Scan system set for Lake County voting

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

For the April 3 consolidated elections, new optical scan units will be used throughout Lake County that will count ballots as they are inserted into the polling place ballot box. According to Colleen Conarchy, director of elections in Lake County, results should be available in about half the time while offering more safeguards to voters.

"The ballots are counted as they go along," said Conarchy. "When the polls close, the results can be sent via modem. The only thing that could hold this process up would be lack of an active phone line. Before, everything had to be packed and moved before the counting could even begin."

The ballot itself is a single sheet of paper that is issued along with a marking pen to the voters. Voters are instructed to completely color in the oval next to the name of the candidates of their choice.

"The optical scan technology prevents an over-vote (voting for too many people for the same office)," said Conarchy. "When the ballot is inserted, it will let the voter know that he or she has voted for too many candidates. It then gives voters the option of spoil the ballot and starting over, or allowing the over-vote which will void the vote for that office."

Registration for absentee voting begins on Feb. 22 and closes on March 6. Requests for absentee ballots can be made online or by calling 360-5928. Ballots need to be returned on or before election day.

"We're different from Florida," said Conarchy. "Ballots have to be returned by April 3 to be counted."

To see a sample of the new ballot, or to register for an absentee ballot online, go to www.co.lake.il.us/cntyclk.

St. Peter School hosts year's only fund-raiser

By JULIE MURPHY
Staff Reporter

Dine in or carry out, the St. Peter School athletic department is hosting its annual fundraiser, Ribs n' Bibs Dinner, on Feb. 24 from 5-8 p.m.

Athletic director Diane Mumenthaler said, "This is really important to us because it is our only fundraiser of the year."

Half of the money raised is earmarked for the upkeep of the school's gymnasium while some of the money is donated to other departments within the school. "Every year we donate $1,000 to the upper grade - where the students participate on our teams - math and science departments," said Mumenthaler.

The menu includes ribs, potatoes, rolls, applesauce, baked beans and homemade desserts. Carry out is available. Students will serve the food in the cafeteria for those choosing to dine in. "The idea behind it is that our kids do all of the serving to thank their parents for driving them around to all of their games," said Mumenthaler, who added that the dinner is not limited to members of the school or church.

Nearly 400 meals were served last year. "We went through about 900 pounds of ribs," said Mumenthaler. "It's a pretty hefty meal."

Dinner prices are $9.50 for adults and $5.50 for children. Tickets will be available in advance at the school as well as at the door on Feb. 24.

"It's important for our school to be self-sufficient," said Mumenthaler.

The event raises money for NICC, a group whose motto is "working for conservation." Additionally, two $500 scholarships will be awarded to one student from the College of Lake County and a second to a student from McHenry Community College Student.

Shineflug and her slate of candidates."

The statement indicated that some of the technical defects with McCarty's nominating petition include minor things such as the notary forgetting to mark "Lake" as the county where the documents were signed on one sheet out of 11 pages of signatures.

It further stated that McCarty felt the voters generally deserved an election not tainted by judicially induced uncertainty. He said, "I cannot in good conscience wage a divisive court battle that could jeopardize the balance of the election for the other candidates."

After the hearing, Larson said, "All documentation (supporting the allegations made by her, Baba and Karasek) came from the county clerk's office. It was not personalities deciding about the signatures, there were legal documents to back things up."

McCarty concluded that he "wished all the Antioch voters to understand and appreciate the extent of improper efforts utilized by the current administration to retain firm control over the village."

have amended and re-filed the suit as requested by Dunn. Neuerman said a copy of the specific location of the easement, and a copy of the specific document signed by Glick that went to Lake County have been attached. Additionally, the final plans that showed the sewer pipelines as drawn up by Clark Dietz, the Village of Antioch's engineers.

"All of the drawings have been submitted to Lake County Public Works," said Neuerman. "There were letters back and forth between Clark Dietz and public works. Public works approved the plans."

He added, "We believe that this is a sign to the judge showing that the plans had been submitted, and were not rejected and not re-routed around the property (Glick's)."

Upon the plaintiff's re-filing, the county again filed to have the case dismissed. Neuerman said the case was originally supposed to go back before Dunn on Feb. 1, but scheduling complications moved the date back to Feb. 13.

"We are still seeking a mandamus (that would order the easement documents to be signed and recorded)," said Neuerman.

400 people," said Markovics. "It's great! The town's people walk around through your formation. We give out small gifts to the children. The people ask for your autograph and are a little bit in awe."

Markovics said the preparation for the trip is intensive. "The week in Atlanta we prepare about 18 hours a day," he said. "You're meeting everybody (the other band members) for the first time, and getting your uniforms together. The coordinators explain about different customs in Europe. Over there, you travel 50 miles and you're likely to be in a different country and speaking a different language. And, we have to learn the music and routines."

The largest performance is held in Geneva, Switzerland before about 10,000 people. "The performances are very integrated with the crowd," said Markovics. "There is a drum performance where the drums are being thrown. It's something."

Highlights from trips past include staying at the NATO base while in the Netherlands in 1999. "They couldn't find enough room for all of us in other places so we stayed on the base," Markovics explained. "It wasn't the most luxurious place I've been, but I can say I did it."

In Luxembourg, the town paid for the entire band to have a spaghetti dinner. In Heidelberg, entertainment included a carnival on the military base. "The safety standards aren't what they are here," noted Markovics. "Some of the rides were crazy."

The tuition of about $3,000 covers everything from nice lodging, breakfast and dinner, transportation and transfers and a cruise down the Rhine River for the three weeks in Europe and preparation time spent in Atlanta. While Lencioni was able to save for the trip last summer, Markovics is hoping to find sponsorship through a philanthropic organization.

Markovics biggest piece of advice to Lencioni is to make sure he has a long layover in Atlanta on the return flight. "Saying goodbye is hard," said Markovics. "You meet great people. You're thrown in together with kids from all over the country you don't know, and you're instantly friends."

Emmons Dist. 33 seeks board of education member

The Emmons School Dist. 33 has an immediate opening on its board of education. Alan Cole, a board member since 1996, tendered his resignation effective Jan. 29.

Cole served as a member of the district's long range planning committee, on the financial committee and on the operations and building committee. In a written statement, the school's superintendent Matt Tabar said Cole's expertise in matters of finances and systems analysis as well as his dedication and commitment to the district would be missed.

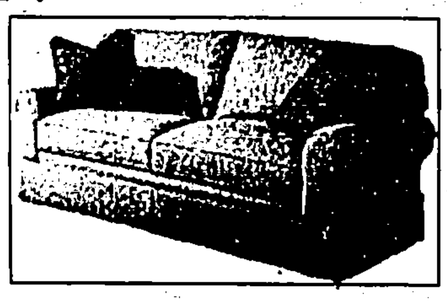

The School Code specifies that a replacement be selected within 45 days. The appointment will end with expiration of Cole's term in November 2001.

Application packets are available at the school office, and must be returned by Feb. 16. The board of education will interview prospective candidates. The interviews and appointment will take place at the regular meeting on Feb. 20 at 7 p.m.

Candidates must be 18 years old, residents of the school district for at least one year and registered voters. Questions should be directed to Tabar at 395-1105.

No valid driver's license

Denise D. Major, 35, of 27806 102nd St. in Trevor, Wis. was arrested for driving without a valid driver's license on Feb. 5 at 6:23 p.m. on Trevor north of North Ave.

Police observed a vehicle traveling southbound on Trevor with one headlight, and pulled it over.

When police approached, it was observed that Major was not wearing a seatbelt. She told the officer she did not have her license with her. Her identifiers were checked with information returning that her Illinois driver's license had expired on March 11, 2000, and that her Wisconsin driver's license was suspended.

She was arrested and transported to the Antioch Police Dept. where she was put through booking procedures and issued citations for no valid driver's license, improper lighting (one headlight) and for not wearing a seatbelt.

Major was released on a signature bond.

Warrant arrest

David W. Pahlman, 36, of 334 Park Ave. in Antioch was arrested on warrant of Feb. 4 at 9:23 a.m. on Rte. 173 east of Rte. 45.

Police saw Pahlman walking in the road on Rte. 173. The officer stopped to ask if everything was okay, and Pahlman asked if he could get a ride into Antioch. The officer asked for identification, but Pahlman had none with him.

His identifiers were checked and came back with a warrant for "failure to appear" issued through Barrington/Iverness Police Dept. Dispatched advised that the bond was for $25,000 with 10 percent applying.

Pahlman told the officer he thought he had taken care of the warrant.

He was arrested and transported to the Antioch Police Dept.

Apaches conclude memorable season

It's been a season to remember for the Antioch Upper Grade School eighth-grade girls basketball team.

The Apaches not only captured the Northwest Grade School Conference title, but stepped up their game in a victory over McHenry, earning the Lake Villa tournament championship. Antioch also finished second in the Riverside tournament.

Overall, the Apaches were 22-3 and 13-1 in conference play.

Katie Hofeldt was the team's best all-around player. She averaged over 18 points per contest while also leading the team in offensive and defensive rebounding.

"She was also our best free-throw shooter and pretty much one of the best I've seen in eighth-grade," said coach Cher'ee Molitor.

Other standout players included Megan Placko for her rebounding and low post play, speedy defender Gina Florian for her play in the high post, guard Amanda Steiskal for her defense, and point-guard Loren Scarborough for her assists and overall run of the offense.

Guard Leslie Collins was also a key defensive player who filled in nicely for Steiskal. Holly Roberts, who was moved up from the seventh-grade team, was a quick and smart player whose contributions played a key role in the regional tournament.

Other players in the Apache roster included: Kristen Baiocchi, Alyssa Casey, Katie Eaton, Rachel Finkelberg, Stefanie Leafblad, Melissa Mullan, Ashley Siwula, Amanda Stahl and Rachel Thiel.

"This is one of the best all-around teams I've coached in my 10 years," added Molitor. "They're smart, talented and a very nice group of young ladies. I can't wait to see their performances at the high school level next year! They will certainly be missed here."

December's snow, ice and cold weather have left many shrubs and trees throughout northern Illinois weighted down and bent, with some to the point where breakage may even occur.

"With proper care and patience, though, the plants can often recover," said John A. Church, University of Illinois Extension Educator, Natural Resources, Rockford.

There are different approaches to handing a snow or ice problem on different types of plants. On evergreen shrubs and trees, Church advisees taking a "wait and see" approach as much as possible. Let Mother Nature reduce the problem by allowing the ice and snow to melt. Do not force ice and frozen snow of branches, which can cause more damage. Loose snow can be brushed off to help reduce the weight load. Broken branches that present a danger to people, buildings, other parts of the tree or to surrounding plants can be cut off and removed if conditions permit. Use boards or other props under heavy-laden branches to help reduce further breakage. Carefully remove heavy snow that has been piled on shrubs from shoveling or plowing.

It may take some patience to deal with evergreens by letting the snow melt and then letting the tree or shrub regain its natural shape, especially if the winter weather continues to be cold and snowy. Some branches may need to be pruned out next spring, while some may remain bent for a year or more, but give time to help the tree regain its appearance before doing any severe pruning.

On deciduous trees, icing may cause more damage than heavy snow. Even if the damage is severe, the tree can usually be saved with proper pruning and care. The trees may not be "pretty" again right away, but most should recover well. Pruning cuts should be made flush against another branch if possible and do not leave small stubs at the ends of branches after pruning. If a branch has completely been broke off the tree, removing the damaged stubs will help keep the tree healthier. Stubs are more susceptible to allowing decay and disease to enter the plant.

Fertilize and water the damaged trees and shrubs properly next spring, Church said, noting that stressed and damaged plants are the most susceptible to disease, insect, and weather related stresses. It will also help promote new growth to replace the damaged areas.

Be careful to protect the plants from additional damage, but also protect anyone working around snow covered plants or doing trimming or other repair work. Don't stand below heavy-laden limbs when working on the plant. If pruning is needed, homeowners may need to contact professional tree trimmers to safely and properly repair large trees. Church advises obtaining several bids and asking each contractor to explain their procedures in advance.

Information on repair pruning, ice-tolerate trees, general maintenance, and other information is available through the Lake County Unit office of University of Illinois Extension, located in Grayslake, phone 223-8627.

THE CLIPBOARD

Tim Froehlig

The real fight club

Why travel 55 miles from Lake County to a ballpark that bears more resemblance to a blueberry than a major league baseball stadium this year?

That is what I attempted to find out as I wandered through SoxFest last weekend in an attempt to get the lowdown on this season's outlook for last year's AL Central Division champion Chicago White Sox.

With attendance on the south-side well below what a playoff team usually draws for several years now, you might figure that the seats might be a little more full this time around. Sure, you can argue that the upper deck view is closer to the moon than the actual field is, or that the team plays in a bad neighborhood. But since when did baseball fans start caring more about being comfortable than the only thing that matters— winning?

"We're going out there to beat the mess out of the other team, not to just try to walk out there, throw the gloves on and win the game— we want to pound you," promised White Sox General Manager and former player Kenny Williams. "Talent alone doesn't always get that done. There's a team unity and a team attitude that carries you through the level of a 162-game season."

There was no indicator that showed this attitude better than how the Sox reacted when several fights broke out in a game versus the Detroit Tigers last spring at Comiskey Park. From then on, they were often referred to as "The Fight Sox." Whether it was ahead by 10 runs or behind by 10 runs, this team never quit.

"I thought the fight was a good yardstick to measure a team from a manager's point of view," said American League manager of the year Jerry Manuel.

React was exactly what they did. The Sox then went on a collision course toward the playoffs, knocking over anyone who dared get in their way, including sweeps of Cleveland and eventual World Series champs New York.

It's one thing to hear a team fill fans' hopes with false promises and optimism. It's an entirely different feeling to be around an organization loaded with young talent, an offense that averaged over six runs a game, and a veteran pitcher named David Wells, who won 20 games last year with the Toronto Blue Jays.

There is also another name that causes a stir every time he is mentioned. At 22-years-old, 6'11" right-hander John Rausch has a fastball in the mid-to-upper 90s, and was referred to by Williams as "possibly the next Kevin Brown."

Last year, while pitching for two different minor league teams, Rausch put up some dominating numbers. He was a combined 16-4 with an ERA in the mid twos, striking out 187 batters in 167 innings. But when will we see the future star who was so highly-touted at last year's Olympics?

"We don't allow Jerry to talk about him," joked Williams, who knows there will be plenty to say when Rausch finally arrives in the big leagues for good. "We'd like to take our time. We've got some other young guys, guys like Wells, Garland, Rocky Biddle, Lorenzo Barcelo and Mark Buehrle. When they get the ball they need to establish themselves."

Rest assured this club was no one-year wonder. They are for real. Newly acquired catcher Sandy Alomar Jr. will provide veteran leadership to this young pitching staff, and the Fight Sox will now be a year smarter, better developed, and no doubt hungry to take the next step, which is— dare we say it— a World Series appearance.

So what if they play 55 miles away in a park that nobody cares about. This team is one of the few left that has heart, character, desire, and yes, they even have fun on the field. Come on Lake County. It's about time we help fill those empty seats and show this club that we care about one thing and one thing alone. Winning no matter what.

Anyway, see you in October, when the playoffs start.

Sequoit girls prevail on senior night; Cats next

BY JOHN PHELPS
Sports Editor

Grant wondered into the Antioch gymnasium at the wrong time. The wrong day, in fact.

Antioch's varsity girls basketball team, while sluggish at times, put together spurts when it needed to en route to a 41-30 non-conference win.

The victory came on senior night in front of a near-capacity crowd.

"We knew we would need some breathing space because they beat us here before (earlier in the season) when we were ahead," said Sequoit head coach Don Zeman. "But Grant is a scrappy team. Their pressure gave us problems."

Ahead 19-18 with 3 minutes remaining in the half, Antioch (10-16 overall) went on a 9-0 spree to go up 28-18 at half. It turned out to be pivotal as Grant (6-15) chipped away in the second half but could get no closer than eight at 36-28 with 3:40 left in the contest. When it did, Antioch responded with an 8-3 spree to close the game.

"Bethany Shore really gave us a lift late in the first half," added Zeman. "And we had others that stepped up in the second half to help preserve the lead.

Shore wound up with a game-high 13 for the hosts, including five during the second-quarter spurt.

Shelley Wolfgram, one of the seniors honored on this night, netted 12 in a well-balanced scoring attack.

Others seniors who were payed tribute included Lauren Reynolds, Sasha Mika, Jayna Jensen, Justine Sinkus, Ashley Brown, Shore and Wolfgram.

But now it's on to Libertyville for a first-round regional date with the fifth-seeded Cats Feb. 12.

"We played them tough down there earlier in the season," said Zeman, whose team fell 41-39 in the closing seconds. A last-second shot just missed.

"We've been preparing for (Libertyville) for three weeks. (Erica) Brown and Wolfgram carried us last time. But I think our perimeter shooting has gotten stronger."

Tip-off is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

The signs are all positive for ACHS rollers

By JOHN PHELPS
Sports Editor

The season may have concluded Feb. 3 for the Antioch varsity girls bowling team, but head coach Steve Haenchen and his squad have much too be proud of as they reflect.

"Beating Libertyville (a couple of weeks ago) for the first time in a long time was a major hurdle for us," said Haenchen. "We might be finished (for the season) but the girls have gained a lot of confidence in themselves."

In the match against the Cats, senior captain Melissa Hansen rolled a sparkling 260, a single-game high for the Sequoits this season. Hansen also claimed the top series on the season (676 against Libertyville) for three games).

"We're going to miss her," said Haenchen. "She provided tremendous leadership for us and finished with one of the highest averages (164)."

ACHS will also have to do without Becky Gillengerten, also graduating this spring. In the Vernon Hills sectional held Feb. 3 at Hawthorn Lanes, Gillengerten led Antioch with a six-game total of 1,007.

"She's also been a great leader and has been very steady for us," said Haenchen. As a team, the Sequoits were sixth.

"We started (the morning round) off about as bad as you can but rebounded really well in the afternoon rounds," said Haenchen.

Case in point was Hansen, who started slow but finished the afternoon with a 547 clip (for the final three games).

The future looks bright because Haenchen brought Ashley Stochmal up from the sophomore team. Stochmal responded, rolling a 540 series, including a high-game of 208 in the afternoon round.

And leadership next season will primarily fall into the hands of seniors-to-be, letter-winners Jackie Feldman and Susan Carlson.

"They were our most consistent performers in January," said Haenchen. "They averaged right around 164 the second half of the season."

Also adding depth includes junior Katie Lyons, along with current sophomores Kelly OfConnel and Susie Martz.

With no warm-up at sectionals, O'Connel filled in for Feldman, who became ill. She responded with a 191.

Haenchen also said that the team had a nice stretch in Jan., rolling team scores in the 840s after bowling poorly for 30 days before.

"With the way we started the season and seeing the improvement up till the end is very encouraging and satisfying," the coach said. "It's set us up well for next year."

For her clutch performances in the 10th frame throughout the season, Gillengerten was selected as the team's Most Valuable Player.

"The thing about this team that stands out was the work ethic and attitudes in practices," said Haenchen. "We have a very positive group coming back."

Another shot at the Devils

ACHS basketball looks for win against Warren

A little home cookin' is just what the Antioch varsity boys basketball team needs right about now.

The Sequoits have been on the road for most of January and had only a 2-5 mark to show for it.

"We've shot very well (during that stretch)," said head coach Jeff Dresser. "Thing is, the opposition just shot a little better."

And maybe now is not the best time for the recently-crowned NSC Lake champion Warren Blue Devils to come calling Feb. 9 at 7:30 p.m. Or is it?

"We have to take care of the ball better than we did last time, especially during crucial points in the game," said Dresser. "You can't get down to Warren by more than 10 - that's too much if you want to have a chance to beat them. We're just going to try and keep the pressure on them and hopefully we'll shoot better than we did last time."

In their first meeting Jan. 5, Antioch could only manage 13-for-37 (35 percent) from the field. Boxing out will also be key, especially with Warren's front-court of Mark Klemm and Aaron Moore.

The game could come down to field-goal shooting, where Antioch (10-11, 2-6) has been steady of late. In a 68-63 loss to North Chicago Feb. 3, the Sequoits shot 56 percent. Eric White paced ACHS with 15 points while Ari Brown added 11.

"Overall, our morale is pretty good," said Dresser. "A win over a tough Warren team would certainly help with the regionals right around the corner."

Schuster, ACHS wrestlers look towards sectionals

By STEVE PETERSON
Staff Reporter

Ryan Schuster may have a chance to relive a friend at the Conant Sectional meet.

The sophomore Antioch High wrestler qualified by winning the championship of his own regional at 103 pounds.

"Ryan Overby of Carmel will be there. We wrestled in the same club, but we have not wrestled each other in two years," Schuster said.

Schuster beat Rich Armour of Warren in the first round in a major decision Saturday before facing Jeff Hanson, a Grayslake sophomore, in the finals. He was down early 1-0, but took control in the third period for a 2-1 win.

The Sequoits' other qualifiers include the following: Thor Swanson advanced to the finals at 152 and claimed second-place; Steve Oliver did the same at 189, losing to Wayne Taylor of Zion-Benton. In third-place battles, Dan Gibson gained the last spot at 119 and Pat Angell did the same at 215.

Antioch finished fifth among eight teams with 105 points. Waukegan won the team title.

"Ryan has had a real steady season. He had experience before high school and it shows. Oliver has battled Taylor for three times and has improved against him every time," said ACHS coach Ted Sieckowski.

Swanson, who defended his title at 152 pounds at the North Suburban Conference meet, looked good in the prelims, downing Nate Rodriquez of Grant in a fall. Ben Hill of Warren pulled out due to an injury in the semis. Swanson lost to Rene Diaz of Waukegan 11-5.

Tom Hart at 119 and James Keating at 125 both were hard-luck fourth-place finishers.

The final team standings: Waukegan, 192; Grant, 146; Grayslake, 124.5; Warren, 110; Antioch, 105; Wauconda, 100.5; Round Lake, 42 and Zion-Benton, 32.

Silver Strings create Golden tones

Five gifted muscians bring their talents together to create pleasant harmonies

By JEFF ZACHARY
Staff Reporter

When I first walked into the party and heard the classical music and saw the young ladies playing their instruments, I knew they were unique and special.

The girls play as a quartet but the Silver Strings actually have five members that alternate on different occasions.

This year, the Silver Strings quartet will celebrate 13 years together.

All of the members began playing stringed instruments while in the first grade at Andrew Cooke Magnet School in Waukegan. They also took private lessons from Waukegan teachers and played in many orchestras including the Waukegan Symphony, Strolling Strings and the Waukegan High School Orchestra.

The five talented musicians are: Jaime Rukstales, 24, who started playing the violin at a very young age in 1982. From 1984-1992 she also played and danced for the American Croatian Waukegan Tamburitzans. From 1985-1994 she studied with Stanley Ackerman and Marilyn Shofeld. In 1993 she attended Interlochen Arts Camp in Michigan. From 1994-1998 she attended Illinois Wesleyan University. Then she became a Violinist with the Knox-Galesburg Symphony and toured in Spain.

Her sister Julie is 22, and has played the viola since 1984 beginning with the "Strolling Strings." She has been with the Silver Strings since their start 13 years ago. She has also played with the "Waukegan Tamburitzans" since 1984. She has been a City of Waukegan employee for five years and also played in the All-State Orchestra in 1993.

Arda Haroian began playing the cello at the age of six years old. She has studied with Carol Vermullen and Tony Porter. Aside from the "Silver Strings" her musical experience has included the "Blue Lake International Orchestra" (while touring Europe for two months,) The Jack Benny String Ensemble and the Waukegan Symphony Orchestra. She also enjoys playing the organ at her church. She is a member of the Armenian Youth Federation and enjoys spending time with her family and friends. She also promotes the future for Waukegan by playing an active role in the community as a professional young adult.

Next on the list is Heidi Shumate who has played with the Zion Chamber Orchestra for six years. She has taken private lessons for 13 years and has been with the Silver strings from the beginning. She is currently studying alternative medicine. Shumate has a full time job as a call center supervisor.

And last but not least is Kate Starshak who attended Depaul University and received a B.A. in Music Business in June, 1998. She played with the DePaul Symphony Orchestra from 1994-1998. SPECIAL EVENT

Carmel High School Street Scenes rock

The Kirk Players will soon be rockin' and rollin' at Carmel High School's Street Scenes annual fund raising event. This wonderful evening of belly laughs, excellent music, fun games and good eats is without a doubt the hottest happening during the chilly month of February.

The first full week in February is traditionally one of the coldest weeks of the year. So what better time could there be to spend an evening with friends, have some hot pizza or brats, and perhaps some suitable libation, while you lift your spirits in music and laughter? Put that twinkle back in your eye by joining the celebration at Street Scenes Variations of 2001 on Feb. 9-10.

This event draws talent from all over Northeastern Illinois and nearby Wisconsin. It's a full evening's entertainment consisting of cabaret-type shows which are all tied together by a central theme. This year the theme celebrates the legends of rock and roll.

The Kirk Players will once again be setting their stage on Fourth St. in room number seven. The special Street Scenes Writing Committee is led by Special Activities Director Paddy Lynn.

There will be 18-25-minute live shows which run simultaneously and continuously throughout the evening. All these shows are original scripts, which are written and produced by a wide variety of community organizations. The Carmel High School students will also be in full swing as patrons enjoy gaming at blackjack, roulette, poker and craps.

In addition to the shows and games, there are several restaurants and pubs scattered throughout the building. There will be about 30 places where you can be wined and dined.

Again this year, the Kirk Player season ticket is worth a free admission to Street Scenes when you purchase one paid admission on Feb. 9 and 10. The cost is $20.

For more information please contact The Kirk Players, W224 Forest Lane, Mundelein.

The musical adventure begins—from wooden toy to real live boy. While Gheppeto is making a marionette for Strombolli's traveling show, he wishes for a little boy. The Blue Fairy grants his wish and turns his new puppet into a live wooden boy. The adventure begins on Pinocchio's way to school as he and his friend Cricket meet a variety of exciting characters. Pinocchio's escapades teach him the value of honesty, unselfishness, heroism and love—all the qualities of a real live boy. The book, music and lyrics for "Pinocchio" are written by Marc Robin. "Pinocchio" is directed by Dyanne Earley.

"Pinocchio" runs through May 19. Performances are Wednesdays - Fridays at 10 a.m and Saturdays at 11 a.m. A performance is added on Monday, Mar. 5 for Casimir Pulaski Day. Individual tickets are $8 and are available by calling the box office at 634-0200.

Surrender Dorothy?

LIFE'S A BEAR

Donna Abear

Some of you may remember that scene from the movie, "The Wizard of Oz", where the Wicked Witch of the West flies menacingly across the skies over the city, leaving a cloudy trail that spells out "SURRENDER DOROTHY".

Well, a strangely similar version of this message has recently arrived with a bang (or is it a whimper?) on the book market. Only the message of this book is more like "Surrender all you Dorothys, and Debbies, and Karens, and Ritas..." and it is not written by a witch. At least, I don't think so.

The title of the book is "The Surrendered Wife" and the author is Laura Doyle, a so-called former feminist who claims to have found the secret to marital bliss. She is currently making the rounds of talk shows, and has started "Surrendered Wife" self-help groups that are spreading like cellulite through the married population.

I can't help but think that, somewhere, Phyllis Schafly, the former hi-profile spokesperson for what I like to call "Stepford Wife values," is smiling.

As for me, I'm leaning closer to gagging, but before I do, let's take a look at a few examples of what the author recommends:

1. A "surrendered wife" respects the man she married by listening to him.
2. A "surrendered wife" relies on him to handle household finances.
3. A "surrendered wife" honors her husband's choices of "socks and stocks."
4. A "surrendered wife" doesn't nag.

Okay. Now I'm scared.

Really, though, these don't sound so bad at first reading. Not until you take a closer look at each item using a real-life focus. So, let's take them apart (as in rip them to shreds with our claws...meowww) one by one.

In example #1, she tells us to listen to our husbands. This would be fine, if only they would say something. Anything. "Honey. Honey. HONEY – turn off that *#"^# TV, so I can show you some respect!!"

In example #2, she says we should also turn over the purse strings. That's everything – including the checkbook. Sorry. No can do. "You want the checkbook, dear? Just try to take it away from me. Just try. I'll get you my pretty..."

Example #3 advises us to honor our husband's choices of "socks and stocks." In other words, when hubby wants to hang a 42-inch northern pike over the couch in the living room, use his dirty socks as accessories for the kitchen counters, and purchase a 50-inch big screen TV for the bathroom because he doesn't like to read, we're supposed to say, "Gee whiz, honey – In Style magazine has nothing on you"?!?

Finally, In example #4, the author tells us that we shouldn't nag. She also says, "In fact, no matter what your husband does, you will not try to teach, improve, or correct him." I'd comment on that one, but I just bit off my tongue.

Seriously, I'm not so sure that last advice is sound. I read a recent study that says that nagging your man will keep him alive longer. Really. Specifically, they were talking about men's health. Men, in general, tend to avoid going to the doctor. They will ignore physical problems for much longer than they should, and when they do go to the doctor, are often too embarrassed to be forthright about their symptoms.

Because of this, married men fare better with wives who nag them into getting the medical care they need. Doctors often ask the wives to come along to help describe the symptoms, rather than trying to drag it out of Mr. Mumble.

So nagging isn't always a bad thing. Sure, your man might get cranky and hide out in the garage a lot, but at least he'll be alive. Now, I must say in the author's defense that it's not that she actually believes transforming ourselves this way will be easy. On the contrary, she says, "I know what I'm suggesting is difficult. I know it doesn't seem fair. It didn't seem fair to me that I had to work so hard to change while my husband continued to sit around watching television..."

That's funny. Doesn't seem fair to me either. Which is why I wouldn't be caught dead buying her book.

As for my husband, if he reads this article and decides to buy me a copy of "The Surrendered Wife" for Valentine's Day, he'd better keep his eyes on the sky over our house. Chances are, he might see a blonde on a broomstick doing a little skywriting of her own:

"WHEN MONKEYS FLY!"

Chicago Auto Show selects Volo Auto Museum for exhibit

The Chicago Auto Show, to be held at McCormick Place in Chicago, has selected the Volo Auto Museum to present the 100th Anniversary Antique Car Exhibit, Feb. 9th through Feb. 18th.

Greg Grams, co-owner of the Volo Auto Museum said, "We have a long and warm relationship with the Chicago Auto Show. We are pleased beyond words that CATA has given us the responsibility of supervising this prestigious display of fine antique and collectible automobiles."

Professionals from the Volo Auto Museum will be managing the exhibit of 16 milestone automobiles that reflect the development of the automobile through the years. These experts will be on hand to answer questions and give a brief history of each car.

One of the cars featured is the Cord L29, the first front-wheel drive car made in America. Grams brother Bill, co-owner of the museum, said of the Cord, "The Cord L29 wasn't perfect—just perfectly beautiful. Today front wheel cars are all around us—it all began with the Cord." He added, "In retrospect, it's been an astonishing 100 years since that first Chicago Auto Show in 1901 and we're proud to contribute to this 100th Anniversary and honored to be chosen."

The Volo Museum is one of the most visited auto museums in the United States. Nearly all the 250 cars on display are for sale. Hours are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. everyday except Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter. Because the museum sell so many cars, the exhibit is constantly changing. Visit the museum online at www.volocars.com or call (815) 385-3644 for more information.

movie review

Lisa Rowe

This Valentine's Day, romance is in the air, but not in this movie.

Traditionally, Valentine's Day is a special occasion when couples can celebrate their love for one another. Director Jamie Blanks brings the horrifying reality of a horrible prank gone wrong that leads to the death of four young women ten years later.

Four friends, Kate (Marley Shelton), Paige (Denise Richards), Dorothy (Jessica Capshaw), Lily (Jessica Cauffiel), are being stalked by an unknown killer.

As an investigation begins to take place, the first girl, Lily, disappears at an art show the four girls attended. While looking for a way out of the art maze, she is startled by a person wearing a cupid mask. She is then killed, but is presumed to be in L.A. when her friends are asked about her whereabouts.

The rest of the killings to not occur until the end of the movie. There is a big controversy about who is the real killer when Kate's boyfriend Adam, played by David Boreanaz, starts to become more involved in her life.

Paige and Dorothy are both killed at the Valentine's Day party that is held at Dorothy's house. All suspicions about Adam are dismissed when the killer "attacks" Kate and they both tumble down the stairs. Adam rushes in and shoots the killer before attacking Kate. When the mask is removed, the killer is found to be Dorothy.

A few moments after the police are called, Kate and Adam have a moment, and we realize that Dorothy is not the killer.

"Valentine" certainly captured the attention of movie-goers in the first few scenes. A girl was killed brutally in a medical lab where she was working on her corpse for her final. Even going into that scene, the movie became very predictable.

The killer was modeled after the typical psycho killer, such as Jason in "Friday the 13th" and Michael Myers in "Halloween", brandishing a butcher knife.

Each of the killings were very gruesome and violent, definitely not for the viewing of children. Most of these scenes were also very predictable, which made the movie seem like it was very slow.

Overall, this movie bit the dust. Even though it is considered a horror movie, the suspense level wasn't maintained throughout the film. With the amount of violence and adult content, the rating of "R" is well deserved.

For its lack of a well developed plot, as well as poor acting, this movie gets two popcorn boxes and a pat on the back.

HOROSCOPE

Aries – March 21/April 20
Speak your mind when a business associate says something hurtful to you early in the week. Don't let this person get away with being so cruel. Let him or her know that you won't tolerate such actions. You'll be respected for standing up for yourself. Scorpio plays an important role.

Taurus – April 21/May 21
A loved one turns to you for support when he or she gets into a difficult situation on Thursday. Be strong for this person, and help him or her to figure out a way to rectify the problem. You really can make a huge difference in this case. That special someone has a surprise for you this weekend. Enjoy, because you deserve it.

Gemini – May 22/June 21
You have to be patient this week, Gemini, when it comes to learning the outcome of a personal situation. Pressuring those involved to tell you their opinions only will complicate matters. Just bide your time. Things will work out the way that you want. Libra plays a key role in all of this.

Cancer – June 22/July 22
Don't let your emotions get the better of you when loved ones ask for help with a family matter. You need to stay calm and focused if you want to rectify this situation. These people are counting on you; don't let them down. An interesting person asks you out on Friday. Say yes, because it's sure to be a good time.

Leo – July 23/August 23
Bite your tongue at work this week, Leo. Complaining about an incompetent associate only will make you look bad. So, keep quiet, and focus on your own work. It's the best way to make it through the week. A loved one asks for your help on Friday. Do what you can for him or her.

Virgo – Aug 24/Sept 22
While you just want to be alone this week, Virgo, you're not going to get your wish. It seems as if everyone wants something from you. Do what you can for these people — especially those who really need your help. Your efforts will be appreciated. Don't worry about relaxing; you'll have plenty of time to yourself this weekend.

Libra – Sept 23/Oct 23
A close friend asks for your help early in the week, Libra. While you're not sure what advice to give, listen to this person. He or she really just needs to talk. That special someone calls it quits. While you're upset, you know that he or she isn't the one for you.

Scorpio – Oct 24/Nov 22
Don't let a business associate coax you into doing something that you don't agree with. Stand your ground, and do what you know is right. Those around you will be impressed with your determination. A loved one turns to you for financial advice. Steer him or her in the right direction. Pisces plays an important role on Friday.

Sagittarius – Nov 23/Dec 21
Think before you speak when in an important meeting early in the week, Sagittarius. Saying something ridiculous will make you look bad and cost you a potentially lucrative opportunity. You certainly don't want that to happen. A close friend reveals his or her true feelings for you on Tuesday. Let this person down gently.

Capricorn – Dec 22/Jan 20
There is a lot to get done this week, Capricorn. So, don't let those around you distract you from the tasks at hand. You need to stay focused if you want to make progress. Others will be impressed with your efforts. A loved one offers to help you with a personal matter. Say yes.

Aquarius – Jan 21/Feb 18
Don't overanalyze an acquaintance's friendliness this week, Aquarius. This person isn't trying to make any moves on you. He or she just wants to get to know you better. Be open to this, and you're sure to gain a close friend. Leo plays a key role.

Pisces – Feb 19/March 20
While you would like to help a business associate who gets into trouble early in the week, don't. This person is in quite a sticky situation, and you don't want to get involved in that. If you do, you're sure to lose the support of your higher-ups.

Group calls for immediate work on highway upgrades

Calling the proposed construction of Rte. 53 "paralyzing and polarizing," a group of elected officials called for state authorities to immediately initiate solutions to Lake County's highway transportation mess.

They spoke out at a press forum at Long Grove sponsored by Citizens Organized for Sound Transportation (COST).

The gathering was triggered by an announcement from the Illinois State Toll Highway Authority of retrenchment from plans for the controversial highway due to financial problems at the agency.

Village Trustee Edward Sullivan told how the Mundelein council remains polarized on Rte. 53. The council members are in unanimous agreement that state officials should launch upgrades of existing highways "this summer," Sullivan reported.

Long Grove Mayor Lenore Simmons called for an immediate solution to highway traffic problems. "$8 million was spent on a Rte. 53 study. That's enough money for eight intersection improvements. Let's not wait any longer," Simmons stated.

"Rte. 53 is a diversion. Rte. 53 debate is a distraction. It takes energy away from focusing on needs now," declared newly elected County Board Rep. Michael Talbot (R-Lake Zurich). Talbot is a former Lake Zurich village trustee.

Stacy Braverman, Grayslake village trustee and candidate for mayor, spoke out in favor of alternatives to Rte. 53, which would make "matters worse" in Grayslake. Braverman pointed out the new multi-versity being constructed in Grayslake will be "strangled" in traffic gridlock unless something is done.

"Let's face reality. Let's join together and improve existing highways," asserted Grayslake Trustee Cheryl in a call for solidarity among Lake County Villages.

Hawthorn Woods Trustee Steve called for end to bikering over Rte. 53. He said there are "other means" to respond to traffic problems than the construction of Rte. 53.

David Kolata of the Environmental Law and Policy Center said tollway officials face "insurmountable" financial problems. He said funding is available for a 10-year plan to upgrade existing highways. The tollway authority needs $3 billion for existing needs without considering Rte. 53.

Only one to speak in favor of Rte. 53 was Buffalo Grove Mayor Elliot Hartstein. To a hail of laughter, Hartstein called Rte. 53 plans "meaningful and effective."

Sullivan ripped a citizens advocacy group campaigning for Rte. 53 as "a sham."

Susan Zingle, a member of COST and the Lake County Conservation Alliance, invited Rte. 53 advocates to join the effort to eliminate congestion. In opening the meeting, Zingle stressed that there are no funds for Rte. 53 "We can't wait any longer. Let's stop the endless divisive talk about a road we can't afford.

Regional framework plan update underway

The process to update the Lake County "Regional Framework Plan" got underway with a public kick-off meeting at the College of Lake County in Grayslake. The county's Regional Planning Commission, along with the Department of Planning, Building and Development, held the kick-off meeting to assure that township and municipal officials, non-governmental organizations, minority groups, business groups, and interested residents will be involved from the beginning of the process.

The Lake County Regional Framework Plan is the comprehensive plan that governs overall development in the country. The current plan, which was adopted by the county board in 1994, contains policies and goals for land use, infrastructure, housing, employment, natural landscape and open space, and community design in the county. The purpose of the plan is to provide guidance for the location, type, and intensity of development to occur throughout the county.

As mandated by the Lake County Unified Development Ordinance, the framework plan must be updated every five years.

The Regional Framework Plan updating process began with the kick-off meeting. Lake County Board Chair Suzi Schmidt an audience of over 100 local community leaders, county residents and staff to welcome them and officially begin the process.

Also addressing the crowd was county board member and Planning, Building, and Zoning Committee Chair Larry Leafblad, who discussed why the planning process is important to Lake County. The county's director of the Planning, Building, and Development Department, Phil Rovang also discussed the importance of regional planning, as did Jim Ford of the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission.

The update includes nine proposed com-

Storied restaurant owner ready to turn over keys

A half-century old tradition will come to a close at the auction block this month.

An auction at Fox Lake Auction and Expo Center is planned for 11 a.m. on Feb. 18, for Sabatini's Restaurant, located off Long Lake in Ingleside, just outside of Round Lake.

The entrance, with its familiar "S" on the brick, tells of the transition. Next to the auction sign is an ad for three comedians appearing at a Valentine's weekend special Feb. 10. The auction will be at Fox Lake Auction and Expo Center, Herman Behm, presiding. An initial showing of the building and property was held.

"The showing went very well," said Angelo Orlando, family spokesman.

Another showing will be held Feb. 10, 1-3 p.m.

The restaurant on the east side of Ingleside has been in the family name since 1947. Its founder was Dominick and "Mamma" Sabatini, who once operated the Erie Sandwich Shop in Chicago.

After Dominick died in 1958, it was up to Mamma and her children to run the popular eatery and keep up with the changing times. Joe Sabatini kept up the 1957 building from when fancy dining was an in-thing through disco and the rise of fast food. It has been redecorated many times since and seats 200 comfortably in four dining areas.

"The Sabatinis would like their legacy to be good food and good fun. There are a lot of people who came here as children whose children are now coming here," Orlando said.

The Sabatinis operated Long Lake Picnic Grove for decades. People could pay a slip fee, park their boat here, and stop by for an afternoon sandwich from the snack shop. They could stay at cabins near a channel.

Orlando said Joe Sabatini wishes to travel more when he gives up the business. He said the restaurant will still be open until the hoped-for new owners take over.

"All the family members grew up in the restaurant business. Joe went to college and earned a business degree while he worked here," Orlando said.

Joe Sabatini, 73 and his cousin, Ralph Rossi, run the restaurant on a daily basis.
The famous such as Mike Ditka, ex-Bears coach and players dined here. "But they never kept a journal or took pictures. People would just wave to them," Orlando said.

"In the 1940s, 1950s, 1960s and 1970s, it was known as a classy restaurant. But in the 1980s, fast food took over. Big dining rooms are making a comeback, though," Orlando said.

Through the years, Mamma Sabatini, whose framed photo has a prominent place in the lobby, would go from table to table to make sure everyone had enough of everything. She kept track of families and their comings and goings.

"At one time, during the disco era, you could not get in the place. There was cars lined up all the way down Rollins Rd.," Orlando said.

Sabatini's was also well-known for post-hunting season progressive dinners. Its drive had white stones, once the symbol of the Chain O' Lakes.

"At first, there were 70 guys and it grew to 300. We had all the prominent people in Lake County here," he said.

The entire area, now Forest Preserve across Rollins Rd. and to the north, was once picnic groves around the lake. People would get permission from farmers to picnic there.

The family history began when Ada and Dominick Sabitini came to America from Valbona, Italy, a tiny village of 100. They left at age 22, with plenty of enthusiasm. Until 1947 they operated the sandwich shop with their family of seven. A backroom had a large table with 10 chairs, known as "Mamma's boardroom."

Local schools to benefit from state assistance

School districts throughout the state, including 18 locally, will benefit with state assistance for their top priority maintenance projects, according to Senator Bill Peterson (R-Long Grove). Statewide, 860 school districts will benefit with several districts receiving two separate grants. Schools in the 26th District will see more than $1.1 million of the $73 million program.

"When large maintenance problems arise, it can really burden a school district financially," said Peterson, a former teach and school administrator. "This grant program helps school meet that burden and make repairs or improvements that will help enhance either the safety, atmosphere or comfort of our local school buildings. With these grants they can make improvements more quickly and give our children a better environment in which to learn."

Fiscal Year 2001 is the second year for the School Maintenance Grant Program, which provides grants of up to $50,000 for projects in one of five categories: emergency, health/life safety, state program, permanent improvement or other priorities. Schools may apply for more than one grant and must provide matching funds for each grant they receive.

The following local school districts will receive funds from the program: Aptakisic-Tripp CC School District 102: $50,000; Barrington CU School District 220: $50,000; Big Hollow School District 38: $50,000; Diamond Lake School District 76: $100,000; Fremont School District 79: $10,625; Gavin School District 37: $100,000; Grant Community High School District 124: $100,000; Grayslake CC School District 46: $100,000; Grayslake Community High School District 127: $100,000; Kildeer Countryside CC School District 96: $100,000; Lake Zurich CU School District 95: $100,000; Mundelein Consolidated High School District 120: $100,000; Mundelein Elementary School District 75: $25,000; Round Lake Area Schools District 116: $91,990; and Wauconda Community Unit School District 118: $50,000. For a complete list of school districts receiving awards, please call the Illinois State Board of Education at (217) 782-4648.

Motion spells progress at CLC

Inwardly and outwardly, the College of Lake County is a study in motion. Passersby of the main campus at Grayslake will see the new University Center taking shape and groundbreaking next year for a new technology building.

In the annual CLC report covering 1999/2000, Chairperson Barbara D. Oilschlager called attention to a new initiative approved by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for enhancing the natural beauty of the campus. One third of the campus will be preserved for natural areas.

What casual visitors and bypassers aren't aware of are seemingly endless changes taking place within school walls. President Gretchen J. Naff reported the changes grow out of a question that CLC officials continually ask: Are we meeting students' needs?

In the last year, CLC added 15 new academic programs and hired 19 new faculty members. New programs include such diverse areas of study as dental hygiene, computer programming, professional cook, automotive certification and early childhood education. Online courses were expanded and three new online degrees were approved by the North Central Assn. of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

A comparison of the composition of CLC's student body shows significant change. In 1985, almost 87 percent of the CLC students were white. Today, the percentage of white students is 64 with 31 percent representing minorities.

Among the constants of a well-rounded overall program is an outreach effort for youngsters from economically disadvantaged homes. In its ninth year, Educational Talent Search serves more than 900 sixth through 12th graders from the Waukegan, Zion, North Chicago and Round Lake school districts. Through field trips, speakers and job shadowing, students are helped in setting long-range goals.

Financially, CLC expenditures continue to increase to fill a broad educational mission. For the report year, expenditures amounted to more than $48 million. Revenues totalled $51.1 million with local resources providing $28.3 million, tuition and fees amounting to $11.6 million and state resources contributing $9.6 million.

Economic picture bright in county

In the Year 2000, the Lake County population went up and unemployment and the number of persons employed went down. Among other things, that could mean that job creation isn't keeping up with the population or it could mean that people prefer to live in Lake County and work elsewhere.

No matter how figures are interpreted, the economic picture in Lake County remains bright in contrast to indications of slower growth at regional and national levels.

Lake County Partners, a consortium of private businesses, issued an economic report for 2000 showing robust health in terms of corporate expansions, relocations, new contracts and partnerships.

For areas reporting, a total of 9,973,390 square feet of new commercial space was occupied, newly acquired or began construction. A total of 1,353,186 square feet of commercial space was put under lease. Together, the two figures demonstrate an astounding amount of building activity in the commercial sector.

The report ranged from business giants like Allstate Insurance, Abbott Laboratories, Baxter International and Motorola to individually owned proprietorships.

The October 2000 unemployment rate in the county was 2.6 percent, the lowest monthly unemployment rate of the year. This compared to an annualized unemployment rate of 3.4 percent for 1999. The national unemployment rate for November 2000 was 4.0 percent. While job figures complied today might indicate an increase in unemployment, the Lake County economy definitely is in growth mode.

The number of workers in the Lake County workforce decreased from an annualized figure of 329,923 in 1999 to 325,684 in October 2000.

The lease and construction figures did not include the new University Center now under construction at the Grayslake campus of College of Lake County or the new Lake Forest Hospital satellite to be built on Rte. 120 east of Grayslake.

Construction, leasing and job creation, of course, are only some of the pieces of the overall economy. They are significant enough, though, to indicate that economy still continues to hum along nicely in Lake County.

VIEWPOINT

Lakehurst outlived experts' predictions

BILL SCHROEDER
Publisher

Marketing experts have documented that the life of the average American regional shopping center is 25 years. That figure loomed large after Lakehurst Shopping Mall locked up last week, five years after it was supposed to be dead.

The hulking Lake County retail center has become a validation of U.S. shopping mall history, hanging on the past few years due to the stubbornness of a handful of tenants, the tenacity of developer Martin Tuohy who continues to pursue a Phoenix-like restoration plan and Carson's, which has reinvented itself to serve an ever-changing marketplace.

Lakehurst opened in the fall of 1971 to Ringling-like fanfare and the echoes of a shotgun marriage with the City of Waukegan. The late Mayor Robert Sabonjian employed creative annexation maneuvers to insure that new shopping center tax income would accrue to the county seat.

The glittering new center in time destroyed Waukegan's long thriving Genesee St. retail community. Pioneer Waukegan merchant families like the Morrisons and Durkins and their neighbors were staggered. Shock waves ripped into other county shopping districts. Libertyville and Grayslake with traditional main street shopping hubs keyed by stalwart business families like Langworthy and Hook particularly felt the impact of Lakehurst. Through the fortunes of geography and the skill of a handful of owner-operators, Antioch avoided the negative impact of Lakehurst.

Lakehurst now stands empty, waiting for an angel. A new generation of shoppers patronizes countless strip malls and a wave of creative merchants finding vitality in hometown settings on main street.

Ominous thought: The clock is ticking for Hawthorn Center and Gurnee Mills.

Changing stores

Mundelein's loss is Gurnee's gain. Larry Idstein is stepping down as president of Mundelein MainStreet. Idstein, a senior manager with the Ace Hardware group owned by Rich Laskowski, is taking over Gurnee Ace after 18 years in Mundelein. Idstein was a leader in revitalizing Mundelein through Mundelein Pride Inc., a forerunner of Mundelein MainStreet.

Durbin challenger

Imagine a U.S. senator more liberal than Diane Feinstein of California or the team of big government spenders from Maryland. According to tax attorney John Cox, they pale in comparison to Sen. Dick Durbin of Illinois, who is up for re-election next year. So Cox has decided to challenge Durbin in 2002, the first Republican to announce. Cox will be remembered as a conservative contender for the GOP nomination for 10th District Congress last year. He finished a respectible third out of a field of 11.

Calling claim

Matt Porter is a man with a calling—goose calling. The McHenry resident captured the title of No. 1 Goose Caller at the fifth annual Avery International Goose Calling Invitational. Porter took home a $5,000 prize. The competition was a fund raiser for youth waterfowl hunting.

Towel questions

Reader Jock J. Jocewicz of Trevor, Wis., e-mailed questions about a Viewpoint report that expensive monogrammed linens and towels left a Navy ship when aides of President Clinton returned to shore. "Just what are expensive monogrammed linens and towels doing on a U.S. Navy aircraft carrier? Did us taxpayers pay for these items? If we did, we shouldn't of. I'm sure the lowly military personnel on that ship didn't have these items unless they were sent to them by family or friends." Reply: The Navy has a long tradition providing first rate hospitality for ship's visitors. Support groups often supply linens and china for flag ships because funds aren't available for amenities. That's why the pilferage by the Clinton aides was vexing.

Clarification

Time to close the book on recent questions about the historic side of the re-election in November of County Recorder of Deeds Mary Ellen Vanderventer. Mary Ellen was the first Democrat to win re-election for county-wide office in a presidential election year. That's what we wanted to point out all along.

County Board wants a new tax, but will it get rid of traffic gridlock?

SEEING IT THROUGH
John S. Matijevich

As Yogi Berra would say, it's like deja-vu all over again.

After failing for some years to get the legislature to grant authority to raise the gas tax up to 4 cents a gallon, the Lake County Board now is looking for a different tax source to do the same thing. Members are asking the legislature to allow them to ask voters in a referendum to approve a 25 cents per $100 sales tax to be used for transportation purposes.

Since pump prices have reached astronomical proportions to the point that the state even suspended for a period of time a sales tax on gasoline, proponents for a county gas tax knew that it would be fruitless to impose such a tax.

It has been estimated that a 25 percent countywide sales tax would generate up to $22 million dollars a year for road work. Right now, the county spends about $17 million per year for road improvements, so the countywide sales tax would at least double the amount now spent for road improvements.

If the legislature approves, the likelihood is that the sales tax referendum would be on the 2002 ballot. Since County Board districts will soon be re-mapped, that is the year when every County Board member is up for election.

The County Board voted unanimously to seek the approval from the legislature. They did so after commissioning a telephone survey of about 800 residents to determine if there would be a strong sentiment for such a sales tax. The results of the poll were that about 62 percent of the respondents said they would support an increase in taxes to improve highways.

My guess is that all of the Lake County legislators will vote for a measure to allow the County Board to put the issue on the ballot. They will use the political safety net, that they are leaving it up to the people to decide. It's a safe vote for them. In spite of all that, I would still vote "no."

I have said it more than once in this column that the driving public is in such a rage about traffic gridlock that they'll support anything to alleviate the problem. But, will all of the new money, if they get it, really put a dent in our traffic woes? I don't think so.

First of all, will those same legislators who cast that safe vote band together to get our fair share of state road funds that can do so much more to improve our highways? The gridlock that is most troubling to area motorists is on the state highways, not on county roads.

Before we start socking local taxpayers with a regressive tax, let's arrange our priorities and demand that the state first accept its responsibility to improve our clogged state highways.

But, no, what will happen will be that the County Board will softly smooze local legislators to pass the

Candidate sidelined by residence statute

Avon Township (Round Lake area, Grayslake) is playing musical chairs with the key position of assessor, the elected official who sets the table for the real estate tax man.

Jan Roth, interim Avon assessor, is giving serious thought to leaving her job after the April 3 election although she could retain the position until Dec. 31.

Because of a combination of legal technicalities and hard luck bad timing, Roth was unable to comply with statutory residence requirements to run for assessor.

Roth, a resident of Newport Township, became chief deputy assessor in 1995. She served in this capacity until Marlene Oplawski, elected in 1997, resigned. The deputy and her husband were in the process of buying Oplawski's Round Lake home to comply with the residence statute when they missed the one year residency requirement before the Jan. 24, 2000 deadline.

"We couldn't close on our home in time. We were off a few days. But that was enough." Roth inquired into the legality of the statutory requirement, but an Appellate Court ruling upheld the one-year stipulation.

If Roth leaves office, the town board has the responsibility of appointing another interim assessor who could be one of the winners of the April 3 election.

Separate views

Fremont Township Supervisor Pete Tekampe and County Board Rep. Diana O'Kelly (R-Mundelein) normally see eye-to-eye on issues for the betterment of the township. They are miles apart, though, on county proposals to build a grade separation at Gilmer and Fairfield Rds. At $4.2 million, Tekampe says the plan is wasteful and unnecessary.

O'Kelly likes the proposal for improving safety and the distinction of being the only township with a grade separation. As the new chairman of the Public Service Committee of the County Board, O'Kelly might have the political muscle to push through the project which is opposed by residents in the area.

What voters want

Less congestion on the tollways, a firm foundation for education and a focus on streamlining government to improve service are good priorities for the Legislature to focus upon this year, said State Senator Bill Peterson. These ideas were outlined by Gov. George Ryan during his State of the State address. Peterson (R-Long Grove) said he is eager to begin work on all three issues. "Schools, traffic congestion and too much government are some of the top concerns my constituents bring to me," said Peterson.

Taste of politics

Loraine 'Raine' Ray got a taste of how government works when selling the family farm in Fremont Township west of Mundelein to the Lake County Forest Preserve Dist. Ray liked what she saw so she has filed to run as an independent for township trustee in the April 3 election. Ray Lake Farm Forest Preserve is being mentioned as an ideal site for establishing a working farm museum.

Name recognition

Although he has been out of politics for eight years, Carl Schrimpf may be the best known candidate on the ballot in the April 3 Avon Township election. Schrimpf, running for one of four township trustee seats, was mayor of Round Lake Beach before defeated by Ralph Davis in 1993.

Replacing Clery

With two mid-term trustees contesting for mayor, first order of business in the Village of Hawthorn Woods after the April 3 election will be to fill a board vacancy. Seeking to replace outgoing Mayor John Clery are Trustees Steve Riess and Keith Hunt. Five candidates have filed for three board seats, Kimberly Lynch, James Silves, Robert Achille, Albert 'Greg' Gehrke and Harry Schildkaut.

From the handshake to the hug

THE PFARR CORNER

Jerry Pfarr

Three weeks ago, Jan. 19, was National Hugging Day. I didn't mention it because I didn't want to alert potential participants and have all kinds of people coming up and hugging me.

I have never been a hugger, or much of a toucher. Physical contact can be a very personal thing. Once, while working at another newspaper, a young woman for whom I had done a favor came over and hugged me. Then she stepped back and exclaimed, "Hey, you're softer than you look!"

What did she expect, Sylvester Stallone? Arnold Schwarzenegger? Hey, welcome to the Pillsbury Doughboy.

Whatever happened to the good old-fashioned handshake? That was replaced by the hi-five, which seems to be giving way to the hug.

The other morning, on television's Early Show, host Bryant Gumbel and author Lisa Birnbach discussed in depth the fact that men are hugging each other in public in greater numbers and with increasing affection.

"More and more," said Birnbach, "men are muscling their way into each other's arms." Today, visit any male hangout and you'll find fellows embracing. From politicos to the performing arts to the average Joe.

"For centuries, men have offered a firm handshake or the proverbial pat on the shoulder, but today they are embracing."

During their discussion Birnbach and Gumbel showed film of baseball's macho Mark McGuire hugging teammates, golf's Tiger Woods hugging his dad and basketball's Michael Jordan hugging player-friends on other teams, for goodness sake. They also showed footage of Al Gore hugging Bill Clinton and then Hillary Clinton.

"Maybe," said Birnbach, "after eight years of watching President Clinton hugging everyone, it's starting to rub off."

(To their credit, they didn't show that overdone old video of Clinton working a rope line and hugging Monica Lewinsky.)

They showed European men dancing in each other's arms as Birnbach observed, In cozier cultures, hugging by men grabbed on long ago. Maybe globalization, the fact we're now all one world, explains the trend.

"But in every revolution there are protesters," she noted. Outside their studio, on the street, they interviewed construction workers in hard hats, all of whom said "no way" would they hug their fellow workers or other male friends.

On the golf course one day an old pal I hadn't seen in years spotted me on an adjacent fairway and came running over while yelling: "Hi! Holy cow! You old goat! Long time no smoke signals!" And then he embraced me in a bear hug.

"Hey," I wanted to say, "I didn't miss you that much. Get your paws off me."

What's next? Will the cop that pulls you over for speeding give you a hug before he hands you the ticket?

Thank goodness I'm not in show business; those people hug at every greeting. They are constantly throwing their arms around even casual friends and then blowing air-kisses an inch away from the person's cheeks. It's so phony!

I went into hiding on National Hugging Day so I wouldn't be clutched or even touched. Now that I am again venturing out in the world, I'm wearing a hard hat.

bill to give them the authority to have the electorate vote on the county sales tax, and think that they've done their job. They would do more good toward getting necessary road work done if they would corner all of the area legislators and seek their support to dramatically increase the Department of Transportation budget specifically for the state highways that have become problem areas in the county.

Even if the string runs out the way they want it to and the people vote for the county-wide sales tax in 2002, what is the guarantee that gridlock will be measurable reduced? Which roads will be improved?

As I recall, one of the prime priorities in the "Depke years" when he was trying to peddle a 4 cents county gas tax was to widen Washington St. to accommodate the proposed convention center near Great America. That one project would have eaten up all of the new gravy revenue, but would it have done a dime's worth to alleviate gridlock? Not on your life. It would have brought more traffic and more road rage.

So, what will happen? The legislature will go along with the County Board's request. The legislature will continue to ignore providing the funds that could really help the traffic nightmare. The voters will think that they are solving a major traffic problem and pass the referendum.

Road builders and engineers will lick their chops and fatten their wallets.

And—down the road—motorists will curse at themselves inching ahead in traffic—muttering "is this why I gave them approval to raise my taxes?"

Now, that is deja-vu all over again.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Observes decline

I was disappointed to read that Fox Lake Ford will be moving out of Fox Lake to Volo. While I understand the need for a business to grow, it is unfortunate that the Village was unable to work with such a large business to meet their needs and keep them in the village.

$40,000,000 in sales generates $400,000 a year in sales tax. That's a big loss to our town, especially when we find out that the new businesses coming in, like Dominick's and Holiday Park, have been promised tax rebates and will generate very little revenue for years to come.

It is clear that something needs to be done to reverse the decline we've seen in recent years under the Pappas administration. I just hope it isn't too late.

Options lessened

Warren High School students are concerned that if the Feb. 27 referendum to increase the education rate is not passed, the option of taking seven classes will change to taking only six classes per semester.

Imagine having to choose whether one may take accounting, band, choir, a foreign language, art or statistics.

Growing enrollment of 200 more students annually may translate to an additional 1,000 students by the year 2005. Growing school districts need additional teachers or the class sizes will become too large. The Warren Board of Education decided to go to the voters to ask for a 12-cent increase in the education fund because this is the only long-term solution to solving the budget shortfall.

Political property

Isn't it ironic the way the Lake County Farm property pops up as an election tool to be utilized by Libertyville township Supervisor Graham in his various campaigns.

Graham used the Lake County Farm property for his "failed" 1999 Open Space Referendum and now, guess what, he's running for reelection as township supervisor hence we're hearing about the Lake County Farm property once again.

It is evident that since he cannot point to any accomplishments of his past four years in office he politicizes the Lake County Farm property to raise the hopes of Libertyville township residents under the guise of assisting them, by the purchase of the Lake County Farm property, in building a sports complex.

Why would anyone in their right mind believe that the purchase of property owned by one taxing entity (Lake County Taxpayers) to be purchased by another taxing entity (Libertyville Township taxpayers) is fiscally responsible? The political mystery is why Graham has not recommended utilizing the hundreds of acres now owned by Libertyville Township to assist the many sports teams that have come to ask for help in obtaining land for various sports activities?

Isn't it time for the Lake County Board to step up to the plate and tell Supervisor Graham that the Farm Property is "not for sale," under any circumstances, and to take this issue off of the political playing field.

Campaign disclosure workshop scheduled

Willard R. Helander, Lake County Clerk, announced that a campaign disclosure workshop will be held via a satellite linkup.

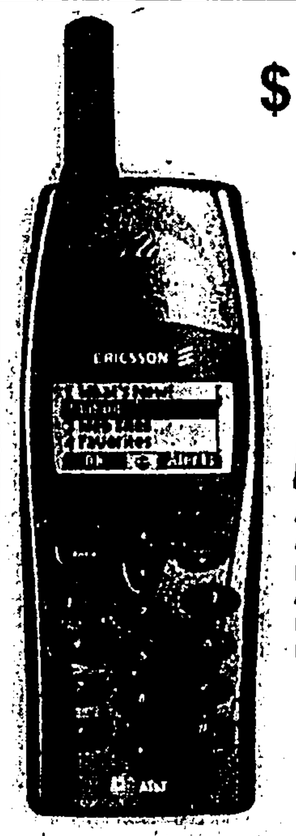

On Saturday, Feb. 19 at 10 a.m. the workshop will be simultaneously broadcast to 17 locations across the state. Co-sponsored by the Illinois State Board of Elections and the Lake County Clerk, the broadcast can be viewed at the College of Lake County, auditorium Room C-005, 19351 W. Washington St., Grayslake.

Lake County Clerk Willard Helander said that the workshop will be geared to the filing requirements of candidates and political committees and will focus on recent changes to the Campaign Disclosure Act and rules and regulations. "Our objective is to provide the necessary tools to permit political organizations to fulfill their obligation under Illinois law. These sessions will be full of information and highlight recent changes to the law and its rules," Helander added.

"This presentation is very helpful to campaign groups and candidates running for office in the Consolidated Election schedule," Helander said. "State board experts will provide a detailed presentation of how to complete reporting forms followed by a question and answer period."

Helander said that the workshop is essential to candidates and campaign organizers involved in fundraising activities in the coming months. "Each candidate and committee should have a thorough understanding of when reports should be filed and what information should be included," Helander said.

The workshop will last approximately two hours. Further information may be obtained by calling the Lake County Clerk's office at (847) 360-5928 or the State Board of Elections at (217) 782-1543.

Board names gallery after Robert Wright

The College of Lake County board of trustees honored the late Robert T. Wright, a former CLC trustee and Foundation board member, by adopting a resolution naming the Community Gallery of Art on the Grayslake Campus as the Robert T. Wright Community Gallery of Art. An official ceremony to unveil a plaque with Wright's name will be held at the next CLC Foundation board meeting on Feb. 15.

A strong advocate for higher education and an art enthusiast, Wright played a major role in the formation of the College of Lake County by chairing the Lake County Junior College Association from 1946-1967. He provided leadership as a CLC trustee from 1971-1977 and served as board chairman in 1976. He also was active in the CLC Foundation, serving on the board for 24 years, participating in the cultural committee and helping to establish the Community Gallery of Art through a significant endowment gift. Additionally, Wright promoted the college and the Foundation through his involvement in many community organizations. He died on Oct. 21, 2000 at the age of 94.

"Mr. Wright was a strong advocate for the College of Lake County and an enthusiastic supporter of the Community Gallery of Art. Naming of the gallery in his honor is a fitting tribute to his work on behalf of art and higher education," commented CLC President Dr. Gretchen J. Naff.

Construction accident lawsuit settled after worker injury

A lawsuit filed against State Bank of the Lakes and several sub contractors has been settled in Lake County circuit court for $605,000 according to Libertyville personal injury attorney Douglas Rallo. Rallo represented Jesus Rodriguez, a construction worker at the bank's Spring Grove facility.

On Sept. 4, 1998, "Jesus was at the site to prepare it for a concrete pour that morning and saw two 4 by 8 sheets of plywood laying on top of one another," said Rallo. "The plywood sheets were not nailed down or marked to indicate that they covered a hole in the floor," he said. Jesus picked the sheets up one by one. "Without any warning on the plywood itself, and since Jesus couldn't see far in front of him when he picked up the wood, he was unable to avoid falling into the hole," said Rallo. Rodriguez was transported from the scene to Lutheran General Hospital in Park Ridge where he was treated for a fractured pelvis and several broken ribs sustained in the accident.

According to Rallo, "the lawsuit alleged that certain subcontractors laid the plywood on the concrete floor without nailing them down and marking them with the word "hole," both of which were required by OSHA. Also, as owner and general contractor in control of the work, the bank had a legal duty to supervise and make sure the property was safe for the workers."

In addition to the $605,000 settlement, Rallo filed a workers' compensation claim for his client, and obtained $133,188 in benefits from his employers' insurance company.

Fitzgerald sponsors hunger relief plan

In an effort to aid our nation's neediest families and combat hunger around the world, U.S. Senator Peter G. Fitzgerald (R-Illinois) is backing legislation making it easier for businesses to donate food to charity.

"For the past decade, we have experienced one of the longest and most prosperous periods of economic growth in our nation's history. Unfortunately, some families remain hungry," Fitzgerald said. According to reports, Second Harvest food banks, the nation's largest hunger relief network, .provides emergency food aid to approximately 26 million Americans each year.

Food banks and charities are facing an uphill battle to meet the demand for food assistance, due in large part to a recent decline in corporate and business food donations. Many food banks have traditionally relied on corporate food contributions to help those in need, but improvements in production technology have caused those donations-generated largely by overproduction and other production inefficiencies-to decline in recent years. Nearly one million needy people-more than 20 percent of all Americans seeking emergency hunger relief-were turned away from food banks in 1999 for a lack of food, according to Second Harvest.

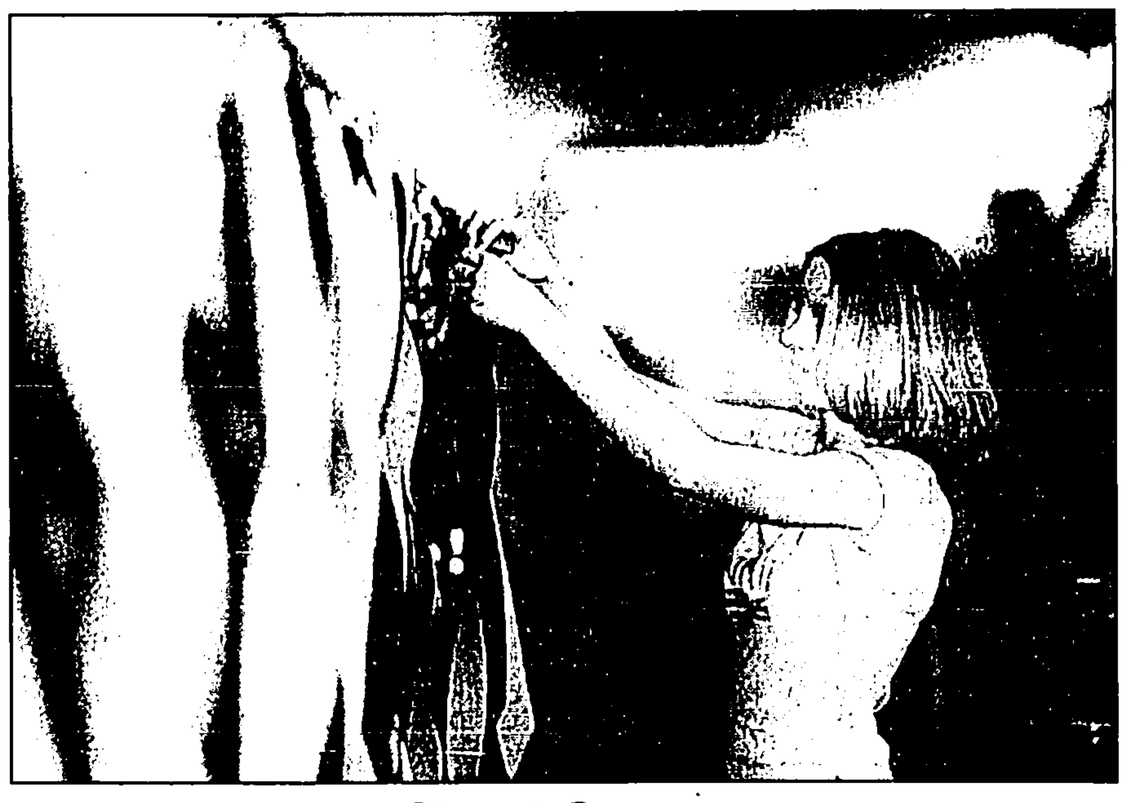

"It's unfortunate when charities have to turn hungry people away because there isn't enough food, especially since so much food goes to waste every year." Fitzgerald said, pointing to U.S. Department of Agriculture statistics showing that up to 96 billion pounds of food go to waste annually in this country.

To address the food banks' shortages, Fitzgerald is co-sponsoring a measure that will expand and increase a tax incentive that encourages businesses to donate excess food to help needy families. Fitzgerald, who initially co-sponsored the hunger relief measure last year, joined Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Richard Lugar (R-Indiana) in reintroducing the bill.

Under current law, corporations are able to deduct from income taxes a portion of the cost of the food they donate to charity. Because many businesses have found the deduction insufficient to offset their costs, they have opted, in many instances, not to make contributions at all. Fitzgerald's bill will increase the deduction to make giving affordable for businesses, and extend the tax incentive-which is currently available only to large corporations-to all business taxpayers, including farmers, ranchers, restaurant owners, and other small business owners.

"This common-sense proposal will boost charitable food donations by allowing farmers and restaurant owners-who are sometimes in a superior position to donate food-to take advantage of this tax incentive and help needy families," Fitzgerald concluded.

Separately, Fitzgerald authored and passed legislation last year to make grocery shopping easier for families who depend on food stamps. The senator's bill, signed into law by President Clinton in Feb. 2000, will improve the efficiency of the food stamp program by making electronic food stamp accounts accessible anywhere in the country.

Lake County Baseball winter training camp has begun. The camp, which consists of eight weeks of specialized, individualized training for ballplayers from 9-12 years of age, has become an annual event for the ballplayers of the area. The camp teaches the skills and techniques of hitting, pitching, catching, fielding, base running and bunting. Each week features a specialized aspect and skill with qualified instructors who instruct in that training for the week. Hitting drills are done each week. This clinic is the perfect spot for the ballplayers to practice their skills, to perfect individual techniques, to increase their knowledge of the game and to participate in their own "spring training" for the 2001 baseball season. This year Lake County Baseball's winter training camp will be held at Wilmot elementary School gym in Deerfield instead of Fort Sheridan. There are still a few openings in the Saturday noon to 1:30 p.m. session and the 1:30-3 p.m. session and on Sunday from 10:30 a.m.-noon.

Head instructor for the camp is the director of Lake County Baseball, Coach Art Mansavage. His son Mac Mansavage and other college ballplayers, coaches and scouts from the area, will assist him. Many of the instructors are from Triton College which is rank seventh in the country. The camp sessions will be limited in size in order to maintain an optimum, ratio of instructors to campers. For more information on the winter training camp, contact Lake County baseball at 945-9606.

If you are interested in becoming a member of a Lake County Chief's Travel baseball team, contact Lake County baseball for more information and a tryout date. Call 945-9606.

The Lancers were led by Aaron Coleman and Jim Nilles who each scored 24 points. Jimichael Slaby added 20 points and 12 rebounds and Rickey Higgins chipped in with 15.

Against Morton, the result was the same but the game was much more exciting.

The Lancers were down by six points with 26 seconds left in the game when Slaby (17 points, seven rebounds) pulled CLC within three.

Higgins was then fouled on a three-point attempt with eight seconds left and made two of three from the charity stripe.

A Morton free-throw put them up by one with just two second left.

Coleman (20 points, six rebounds) passed the ball to Nilles (17 points, seven rebounds) who put a shot up under pressure which rattled around the rim and then fell at the buzzer to give CLC the 77-76 win.

Women's Basketball

The Lady Lancers' losing ways continued after a 70-47 loss to Morton that dropped CLC's record to 2-22 on the season.

The Lady Lancers were led by Stacie Peterson and Stephanie Cripps who each scored 11. Kristen Pagano added eight points for CLC.

Athlete of The Week

Round Lake High School grad Jimichael Slaby was honored as the Skyway Conference Player of The Week, shairng the honor with Waubonsie's Randle Berkhalter.

Bulls to award scholarships

The Chicago Bulls and CharitaBulls, the Bulls' charity foundation, will once again award four $2,000 scholarships to local high school seniors who plan to begin college in 2001. The Bulls have always placed a significant emphasis on higher education and are pleased to assist four local students with furthering their education. In honor of former Bulls star John Paxson, one of the scholarships will again be designated as the John Paxson Scholarship Award. The recipient of this award will be the student who has excelled both academically and athletically.

In order to apply for a CharitaBulls Scholarship, seniors must submit an official application form, his or her transcript, and an essay of 500 words or less on the subject: "If you were a presidential candidate, how would you change the current education system and why? What education platform would you adopt and how would you execute this platform? How has education made an impact on your life and how will it continue to make an impact in the future?"

Students that apply for the CharitaBulls Scholarships will be able to express their views on education and how it has, and will, continue to make an impact on their lives.

Applicants will be judged on the basis of academic and extracurricular achievements, along with the contents of the essay. Neither race, sex, nor financial status will be factors in determining the winners. Applications must be postmarked no later than Feb. 5, and the scholarship winners will be announced by March 14. The scholarships can be used at any accredited four-year college, two year junior college or community college.

Scholarship applications and information can be obtained from high school guidance counselors or by writing: CharitaBulls Scholarship Program, Chicago Bulls, 1901 W. Madison, Chicago, IL 60612.

Martinson steady but CHS girls fall on senior night

By STEVE PETERSON
Staff Reporter

Next year at this time, Christine Martinson and several other present juniors will experience a Senior Night for their last Carmel High home game.

This year, the honor went to Kelly Bacehowski and Sam Rinella and manager Rosanne Krupski.

But if Martinson's steady play of late carries into next season, Carmel could have three scoring threats or more.

But on this night, the Corsairs could not give their seniors a going-away win, with a 47-37 loss to St. Viator in East Suburban Catholic Conference play.

Martinson, a 5-11 junior center, scored 16 points and had 10 rebounds.

"She is playing with a lot of confidence now. She is our best player. She defends the other team's best scorer and she rebounds," CHS coach John Ryan said of Martinson.

Martinson, who is from St. Bede in Ingleside, could compliment the shooting of Caitlin Krombach and Megan Lick next year. Both the freshman Krombach and sophomore Lick scored seven points against the Lions.

Carmel is readying for the Feb. 13 clash at home with Wauconda in the first round of regionals.

Foul trouble was a key factor as St. Viator outshot Carmel 19-11 from the free-throw line, Ryan said. St. Viator's leading scored only had 10 points but eight players contributed.

"They did a great job of intense defense in a physical game," Ryan said. "Foul trouble murdered us."

St. Viator dominated the rebounds, a Carmel weakness, Ryan said.

Carmel actually had the tougher defense early. It took St. Viator five minutes to gain its first point, the first basket coming seven minutes into the game. Carmel had an 7-1 lead early. But St. Viator adjusted quickly, and the Corsairs settled in for many one-shot trips.

Carmel hung in there in the second quarter, coming back from a six-point deficit for a one-point Viator halftime lead.

The game was still tied 24-24 when the Lions made their big move. A 10-2 run, with many of the five baskets off steals, put the visitors ahead to stay.

Carmel closed the gap to four points as Martinson and Krombach forced a turnover, leading to a hoop by Martinson. It came with 2:34 left, the last Carmel field goal. St. Viator scored its last eight points from the free-throw line.

Carmel lost its fourth straight game for a 17-9, 5-4 ESCC mark. Carmel battled Benet on the road before a Feb. 13 home clash with Wauconda to open regionals.

"It is a pretty important game for us. We want to go into the regionals off a good game," Ryan said.

2000-01 Lakeland Boys Basketball Progress Report

A quick look at Lakeland-Area teams heading into the final weeks of the season

North Suburban Lake Division

Antioch

Current record: 10-11, 2-6 (T-5th NSC Lake)
Last year: 14-14, 5-9 (T-5th NSC)
Coach: Jeff Dresser (13th yr.)
Key players: G/F Eric White, 6-3, Sr; G/F Ari Brown, 6-2, Sr; G Adam Durham, 6-2, Sr; C Josh Bonner, 6-6, Jr; G Brian Walsh, 6-3, Jr.; F Jeff Huebner, 6-3.
Down the Stretch: They've been on the road for most of January. But which team will show up for the up-and-down Sequoits? It depends on how well Brown (11 ppg) and White (18 ppg) are shooting. Both are around 37 percent from behind the three-point arc.

In the first-half of the season, the Sequoits had trouble starting games. During it's current road swing, which they are 2-5, ACHS has had trouble finishing games after sprinting out of the gates.

Bonner, Huebner and Walsh have been steady in the middle. But turnovers, especially late in the contest, have wreaked havoc for a team that could easily be 14-5 and close to the top of the NSC Lake. Starting strong and finishing strong - both need to happen if the North Suburban school wants to make any waves in the upcoming regionals.
Mid-season grade: C

Libertyville

Current record: 11-10, (3-5 Lake)
Last year: 9-18 (3-11 NSC)
Coach: Jim Goodwin (2nd yr.)
Key players: F Matt Schaefer, 6-4, Sr; G Austin Yarc, 5-9, So; C Joel Castner, 6-7, Jr; C Pete Silvestri, 6-6, Jr; G Ben Angstrom, 6-0, So.
Down the Stretch: The Cats, although inconsistent at times, have already surpassed last season's win total of nine with two weeks left in the season. Schaefer, Libertyville's leading scorer (15 ppg), has continued to impress as has the sophomore back court of Yarc and Engstrom. The Cats need to focus on the little things in preparation for the regional tournament. Last year, Libertyville, the 14th seed, shocked No. 3 Deerfield in the opening-round. Anything does and usually happens when March rolls around.
Mid-season grade: B-

Mundelein

Current record: 17-5, (4-4 NSC)
Last year: 22-8, 8-6 (T-3rd NSC)
Coach: Perry Wilhelm
Key players: F/C Graham Beatty, 6-9, Sr; F Marlow Hicks, 6-6, Sr; C Mike Oblinger, 6-6, Sr; G Steve Plucinski, 5-11, Sr; G Kyle Wilhelm, 6-0 Sr.
Down the Stretch: The Mustangs are terrific outside of conference with a mark of 13-1. However, as one of the pre-season NSC favorites, they have struggled in the Lake division. "There are no easy games in the North Suburban," said head coach Perry Wilhelm. "It's turned into a defensive league."

Big-man Graham Beatty has been a force inside, averaging 15 points and eight boards. Senior point-guard Kyle Wilhelm (14 ppg, 3 apg) has become a big-game player as well as a nice outside complement to Beatty when the inside game isn't working.

Mundelein has struggled lately, losing four of its last six games. Plucinski, Oblinger and Hicks diversify the offense. All will be needed to step up if the Mustangs are going to go far in the post-season.
Mid-season grade: B

Warren

Current record: 15-4, (7-1 Lake)
Last year: 22-7, (12-2 NSC)
Coach: Chuck Ramsey (8th yr.)
Key players: F Mark Klemm, 6-4, Sr; F Aaron Moore, 6-3, Sr; F Russ Schaibly, 6-4, Sr; G Matt Vandaele, 5-10, Sr; G Keith Kailer, 5-10, Sr.
Down the Stretch: Once again, the Devils find themselves in the familiar position as North Suburban Lake Division champs. It's their third straight conference title and more good fortunes look to be in the cards.

Warren's patented defense is as stingy as ever, holding opponents to around 40 points per game. The front-court of Klemm and Moore, both averaging 12 points per game, has been solid all season long. However, the back-court needs to be more consistent on offense for the Devils as we close in on regionals.
Mid-season grade: B+

North Suburban Prairie

Wauconda

Current record: 10-9 (4-4 Prairie)
Last year: 7-18 (Independent)
Coach: Rich Wolf (1st year)
Key players: F Ron Christians, 6-4, Sr; C Brad Breakfield, 6-6, Jr ; F Tim Bailey, 6-4 Sr.
Down the stretch: Behind Christians (13 ppg) and Bailey (10 ppg), Wauconda has plenty of firepower on offense. Breakfield has been steady on the boards. The Bulldogs are very respectable at 10-9, 4-4 in the Prairie Division. Wauconda has been in just about every game this season. They finish contests strong but only after they have loosened up and are too far behind.

It could be a sleeper in the regionals if it can avoid any second-quarter blitzes. They also need to avoid the opponents transition game and keep them in the half-court set. Wauconda, the ninth seed, travels to eighth-seeded Antioch for opening-round regional action.
Mid-season grade: C

Grant

Current record: 6-13 (1-7 Prairie)
Last year: 15-12 (Independent)
Coach: Phil Ralston (1st year)
Key players: F Eric Lemcke, 6-2, Jr; F Andrew Winne, 6-4, So; F C.J. Walleck, 6-4, So.; G Brendon Lutz, 6-0, Jr.
Down the stretch: January wasn't a kind month for the struggling Bulldogs. But even though the wins aren't there, this team continues to show improvement.

"It's been nice to see different guys step up each night but we need to get all five of our guys to play their best ball at the same time," said Ralston. The main constant on offense has been Winne, averaging 15 points and seven boards per game.

"He's a load for other teams to handle. He's been doing an outstanding job and persevering against some pretty tough defenses," added Ralston.

Grant, the 14th-seed in the upcoming regionals, have to keep opponents under 60 points per game to have a chance for a 'W'. Experience has been invaluable for this young squad, which has a tough opening-round assignment - at No. 3 Mundelein.
Mid-season grade: C-

Vernon Hills

Current record: 11-12 (5-3 Prairie)
Last year: Inaugural season
Coach: Michael Murphy (1st yr.)
Key players: C Steven Melvin 6-6, Jr.; G/F Matt Glees, Jr.; Pt.-guard Jason Newburger, 6-2, Jr.; F Noah Borden, 6-1, Jr.
Down the stretch: In its first season, the Cougars have turned some heads as they hover around the .500 mark. Glees (15 ppg) leads three players averaging in double-figures. Melvin is at a 13 point-per game clip while Newburger averages 10, so there is plenty of offense. Glees is also excellent from the foul line, shooting 85 percent. Vernon Hills is currently alone ion third in the Prairie at 5-3, a nice showing for this first-year program. A strong non-conference schedule has also helped the team with maturity. The Cougars are a dangerous 12-seed in the upcoming regionals, where they travel to fifth-seed Lake Forest. The time could be right for Vernon, as the Scouts have been reeling as of late, losers of five of its last six.
Mid-season grade: C+

Round Lake

Current record: 0-21 (0-8 Prairie)
Last year: 7-18 (Independent)
Coach: Leroy Nordlund
Key Players: F Simon Morrison, 6-3, Sr; C Tony Spangelberg, 6-4, Sr; F Dre Gant, 6-4, So; F Al Sparaco, 6-1, Jr.; G Jim Nicoline, 5-10, So.
Down the stretch: This isn't a bad team. But it's most likely going to come down to a first-round regional date at Grayslake for the Panthers - for that elusive first win, that is. This team is young but injuries and foul trouble have forced as many as three sophomores into quality playing time. That's good, though. They are learning on the job. Nicoline has impacted the offensive output, as has Gant. But Gant needs to stay out of foul trouble and leading scorer Morrison (11 ppg) has been prone to injuries. Morrison is one of the best players in the area that you don't know about. Put it all together in time for regionals, then they will.
Mid-season grade: D

ESCC

Carmel

Current record: 12-10, (5-5 ESCC)
Last year: 10-16, (5-8 ESCC)
Coach: Joe Molloy (1st yr.)
Key players: F Joe Baumann, 6-3, Sr; C John Poletto, 6-4, Jr; G Matt Muto, 6-0, Sr; G Adam Bieschke, 5-10, So; C Brian Schlemm; 6-5, Jr.
Down the stretch: The Corsairs have been up-and-down all season long and continue to hover at or around the .500 mark. Joe Baumann, the area's leading scorer, continues to pace Carmel and Matt Muto is one of the area's leading shooters from behind the arc. However, the rest of their lineup has struggled at times for consistency and they have had lapses in both defense and effort on the road. For the Corsairs to advance in the playoffs, other players will have to step up and complement Baumann.
Mid-season grade: C+

Fox Valley

Grayslake

Current record: 1-19, (0-12 FVC)
Last year: 22-7, (16-2 FVC)
Coach: Tim Bowen (1st yr.)
Key players: G Chris Turner, 6-0, Sr; F Adam Zwolfer, 6-6, Jr; G Josh Peregrin, 5-10, Fr; F Mike Armstead, 6-0, So; G Nishan Pilibosian, 5-8, So.
Down the stretch: First-year head coach Tim Bowen has had to completely overhaul his roster at various points during the season. The Rams continue to struggle on both sides of the ball, but give a valiant efforts in most games. The only consistent scorer throughout the season has been Zwolfer, netting 11 points to accompany seven boards per contest. Peregrin is a flashy guard while soph's Pilibosian and Armstead give the Rams a solid nucleus for next year. Players have been slow to respond to Bowen's new system, but if his success in the Warren program is any indicator, the future looks bright for Grayslake.

Tennis

Dennis Nevolo, a fifth-grader at Woodland Intermediate School, has had a very successful month in USTA Tennis tournaments. Nevolo, a transfer from Massachusetts was one of the top ranked junior players in New England.

Nevolo competed in the Franklin Winter championships in Detroit, Mich. This National tournament attracts some of the top boys 12-and-under tennis players in the country. Nevolo took fourth-place in the tournament winning three matches before losing in the semifinals. His semi-final loss was in three sets to the no. one seed and a player that is expected to be ranked in the top 15 in the nation.

Nevolo had taken third in a Midwest Designated tournament earlier this month in Fort Wayne, Ind.

What makes this more impressive is that he is in the bottom years of his age division. He will be able to play in the 12-and-under division next year as well.

The 2000 Chicago District rankings for junior tennis have become official. Dennis Bogatov, a fourth-grader at Woodland Intermediate School, finished the year ranked as the no. one boys 10 and under. He was also ranked No. 9 in the boys 12-and-under division when he competed against the older players. Keith Moran, a student at Viking Middle School in Gurnee was ranked No. 10 in the boys 12-and-under division.

For Your Valentine

Will you be my valentine? Pamper the one you love

After all the years of exchanging endearing love notes and calorie-chocked chocolates, aren't you curious why the world has chosen to express their deepest emotions on February 14th? According to history, during the third century a former priest and romantic martyr, Valentine, united lovers in marriage to help love-struck men stay with their sweethearts and escape the Roman military "draft."

Performing these marriages robbed the Roman army of soldiers, so Valentine was arrested and sentenced to death on February 14th. On the day he was to die for his conviction of love, he wrote a heart-warming note of friendship to the daughter of a prison guard that he befriended, thanking her for her dedicated loyalty and companionship while he was imprisoned. February 14th was then designated as the day to celebrate the tradition of love notes called Valentines!

In modern times, we replicate this sentimental act of love and appreciation by expressing emotion and affection on Valentine's Day. Sweethearts, dear friends and adoring parents give and receive simple tokens of admiration to celebrate each other.

Will You Be Mine?

For those of you struck by Cupid's arrow in a long-term relationship or a new romance, create a day of love to enhance your vow of devotion. Pack a picnic basket with your mate's favorite treats and take a drive through the country until you find the perfect secluded area to enjoy your time together. Select a desired destination you've both been meaning to visit like a fine art gallery, an exhibit at the local museum or even take a trip to watch the elephants jump through hoops at the circus!

Friends Forever

Friends deserve a token of appreciation and what better day to show them than Valentine's Day. Delight your best pals by inviting them over for a girls' night in. There are no limitations to what fun you can have! Bust out those tissues for repetitive viewings of romantic movies from "Casablanca" to "Sleepless in Seattle." Make sure everyone has an appetite for pizza ordered with all the works. Dust off your hand-painted mugs made in elementary school and brew homemade hot chocolate — don't forget to add the fresh marshmallows! The warming sensation will take you and your girlfriends back to memories of former Valentine crushes. Conclude the evening of fun and laughter with a goodie bag of sinful treats of smooth, indulgent chocolate, or try the guilt-free route with Bath & Body Works Chocolate Raspberry Truffle tea light candles. These little edible works of art are the perfect addition to any girly evening.

This Valentine's Day when hearts everywhere are a flutter, indulge your loved ones and yourself in sentimental tokens of love. And in the spirit of St. Valentine, sign them "with love from your Valentine."

For the love of chocolate: Melting the myths

Most of us don't need the Saint Valentine's Day holiday or seeing previews for the movie "Chocolate" to initiate chocolate cravings. American are eating it up. According to the US Department of Commerce, in 1997 the average American adults ranked chocolate ass the most -craved food and ass their favorite flavor by three-to- one margin.

"Chocolate is usually eaten with a twinge of guilt, because people think that it's unhealthy," stated Toby Stern, R.D., L.D., Registered Dietitian with the Lake County Health Department / Community Health Center and a spokesperson for the Illinois Dietetic Association. "Researchers are now telling us that we can have our chocolate and eat it too."

New research reveals encouraging evidence that melts the myths about beloved chocolate:

Myth: The fat in chocolate will raise cholesterol.

Fact: Saturated fats normally are what increase cholesterol in our bodies. Stearic acid, which is the main saturated fat in chocolate(specifically cocoa butter), does not raise blood cholesterol levels. A study where subjects ate a 1.4 oz chocolate bar instead of a high carbohydrate snack found that the chocolate bar did not raise low- density lipoprotein levels (LDL or "bad cholesterol") but actually increased high - density lipoprotein levels (HDL or "good cholesterol").

Myth: Chocolate doesn't have many vitamins or minerals.

Fact: While chocolate milk has more sugar, it also has higher levels of zinc, potassium, copper and magnesium than plain milk. Solid chocolate is a major source of copper and magnesium. Copper helps the body use iron and aids in the development of connective tissue, blood vessels, and skin. Magnesium is part of the bone structure. It also has a role in the nervous system and in the break down of protein. Children will get even more of these valued nutrients when offered chocolate milk because they tend to drink two-thirds more chocolate milk versus plain milk.

Myth: Chocolate is high in caffeine.

Fact: Contrary to what many believe, chocolate is not high in caffeine. The amount of caffeine in a typical 1.4 oz bar or an 8 oz glass of chocolate milk is equivalent to a cup of decaffeinated coffee with 6mg caffeine. An ounce of bittersweet chocolate has more, from 5-35 mg. These levels are all well below the 140 mg that is in a cup of brewed coffee. Stimulant effects of caffeine can be initiated after consuming 150-200 mg, but this varies from person to person.

Myth: Chocolate causes cavities.

Fact: Candy alone does not cause cavities. Susceptible teeth, dental plaque, and food cause cavities. Cocoa and chocolate actually have the ability to offset the acid - producing potential of the sugar they contain. Milk chocolate has a high content of protein, calcium, phosphate and other minerals, which have protective effects on tooth enamel. Also, since it contains fat, milk chocolate clears the mouth relatively faster than other candies, so milk chocolate may be less cavity causing. Remember that the best way to prevent cavities is to regularly use fluoride, practice proper oral hygiene, visit your dentist.

All water not equal in terms of health benefits

Nutrition experts agree that people should drink six to eight glasses of water per day as part of a healthy lifestyle. But how much good drinking all this water is actually doing depends upon the quality of the water itself.

Plain tap water, for example, can contain microorganisms such as Cryptosporidium and Giardia that can cause serious illness that is potentially fatal. It may also contain other contaminants detrimental to health over the short or long term, such as lead or high levels of chlorine.

Links between microorganisms and illness are long-standing and well established. However, chlorine and substances linked to the presence of chlorine in drinking water, are only now being fully evaluated by the medical and scientific community. Recently, studies have proven links between chlorine byproducts found in chlorinated tap water, miscarriages and cancer.

It's little wonder that The Water Quality Association, which polls consumers annually on water-quality issues, reports that 72% of consumers were concerned with some aspect of their water quality, with almost half of consumers indicating they are concerned about possible health contaminants in their drinking water.

There are several ways to avoid drinking water containing unwanted contaminants. At-the-tap filtration units offer the most cost-effective and convenient method of water treatment in the home. Some health-conscious individuals who aren't near their kitchen choose bottled water that can come from questionable sources. There are also various kinds of water filtration systems on the market and they are not all equal when it comes to eliminating unwanted substances.

Many of the most popular filtration systems do an adequate job of removing unwanted contaminants. However some systems such as reverse osmosis also remove or substantially reduce the levels of beneficial fluoride. While there is some debate over the use of fluoride still today, groups ranging from the American Dental Association to the Centers for Disease Control still credit fluoride with providing substantial benefits for dental health and support its use in drinking water.

One of the most effective filtration systems, in terms of both removing unwanted contaminants and improving the taste of tap water, is the carbon-block filtration method. This method is used in filters which supplies filtered tap water at the faucet whenever the filtering system is activated.

The best way for health-conscious consumers to protect themselves is to use a filtering system backed by certified testing and to make sure that the filter is kept in good working order with proper maintenance. With the alternatives to unfiltered tap water now available, and their ease of use compared to the devices of the past, there's little excuse for informed consumers to expose themselves to unwanted health risks from their own tap water.

2000 a record-breaking year for organ donation

The Regional Organ Bank of Illinois (ROBI) record-breaking year for organ donation in 2000. 287 donors made possible 859 lifesaving organ transplants marking an increase in organ donation in Illinois and northwest Indiana for the second consecutive year.

"We are extremely proud of our achievements this past year," said Jerry Anderson, ROBI's President/CEO. "Success for ROBI means that lives were saved and, because of th work we do, hundreds of people are celebrating a second chance."

ROBI also set a record in bone donation for the third year with 597 donors. Tissue donation remained high across the board helping thousands of recipients through life-enhancing surgeries.

ROBI's success rate continues to grow despite the fact that donation numbers remain flat throughout much of the nation. Anderson attributes ROBI's success to an increase in public awareness through community and school programs and a strong partnership with the 183 hospitals in our service region. In addition, support from other donation-related organizations including the National Kidney Foundation of Illinois, Secretary of State Jesse White and many others is key to our successful outreach efforts.

Despite ROBI's success, more than 400 Illinois men, women and children died last year waiting for a transplant. Another person is added to the national waiting list every 14 minutes, a list that now includes more than 71,000 people (more than 4,100) in Illinois alone). Sixteen of these people will die each day waiting.

"Many of these deaths could be prevented if all potential donors would, in fact, become donors," Anderson said. "We are dedicated to increasing donor awareness and education. Too many people are waiting and far too many are dying for this not to be an all-out commitment."

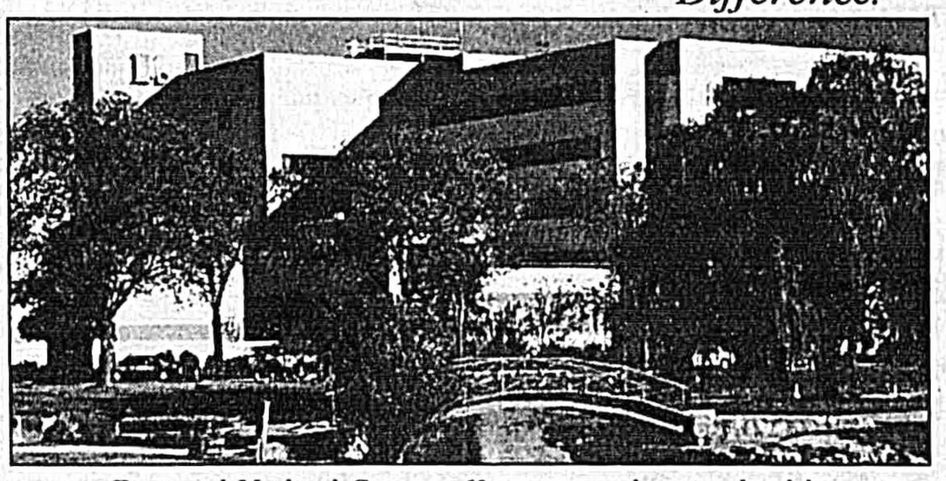

Organs and tissues from a single donor can help more than 25 individuals. Choosing to be a donor is as simple as signing a Uniform Donor Card (such as the card on the back of th driver's license) and, most importantly, sharing your intentions with family members.

ROBI is a not-for-profit, federally designated organ procurement organization serving the northern three-fourths of Illinois and northwest Indiana. ROBI is responsible for recovering and distributing organs and tissues for transplantation in accordance with strict federal guidelines. In addition, ROBI provides education about organ and tissue donation for healthcare professionals and the general public. ROBI's main office is in Chicago with satellite offices in Bloomington, Champaign, Peoria, Rockford and Springfield.

Working smarter serves heart patients faster

As the population of Lake County grows, so do the number of patients needing cardiac diagnoses and treatment. Since 1990, Condell Medical Center's Cardiology Services area has grown 25 percent, with another 30 percent increase expected by 2010. Condell cardiologists expect to do more than 1,300 diagnostic and interventional procedures in 2001.

To help meet this increasing demand, the Cardiac Catheterization Laboratory of Condell Heart Center was set up to expand along with the population. It was originally designed to turn one diagnostic lab into two — a "Swing Lab" — at minimum cost and construction time.

In many hospitals, a cardiac emergency means other patients have to wait an interminable amount of time. At Condell Medical Center, however, the wait is minimal because of our Swing Lab. A single piece of imaging equipment is mounted so that it will pivot between two rooms that are separated by a sliding lead-lined wall. Each room has an X-ray table and its own monitors. while an emergency patient is being treated, another patient can be prepped in the second room. As soon as the first case is finished, the imaging

Good discipline is a very special gift for kids!

PARENT'S PLACE

Dr. Sherri Singer

Hi Dr. Singer,

We thought you would appreciate this! Our 6 year old daughter is seeing a Special Ed teacher at school. Her behavior has been a problem at school for some time. School has not really been using any kind of discipline that we can identify. All we see is a bunch of coddling and special attention. We have recently begun implementing some of your strategies which we believe in wholeheartedly. We especially believe that if the school is not going to use correct and appropriate discipline to stop our child's bad behavior during the situation, then we will do so after school so that the child can be held responsible for the bad behavior somewhere. We read and saved an article you wrote about after school/camp consequences being good for kids. So far, it is working well for us. When we told this Special Ed teacher that we needed to have feedback about the child's daily behavior so we could follow up on it with appropriate consequences after school, her response was, "poor child." We were so incensed with this woman's incredible backward thinking. We believe that good discipline is the most important thing for a child so he or she can make it out there as an adult and here, this woman is feeling sorry for our child because we want to give our child the structure the school isn't! We are livid about this and have shared that with this very sad woman. We wanted to share it with you and get your take on it. R.M.

Dear R.M.,

I think you already know what I am going to say so here goes...I am also livid about your situation. What is wrong with so many adults today who are so afraid to discipline a child? You already know that I believe that good, appropriate discipline is one of the greatest gifts any adult can give a child. Letting them go wild with bad behavior and coddling them for it, is failing them by setting them up to think the world is going to bend to them every time. I deal with this everyday. I help parents undo the damage done by total lack of discipline. Unfortunately, I believe that total lack of discipline in our schools is an epidemic at this point. I have parents who come in and tell me that the classroom teacher is complaining everyday about their child's behavior. But, when I ask the parents to ask the teachers what kind of discipline is in place to stop that kind of behavior in the classroom, it's always the same answer. There is none. Tell me why a child who is obviously getting some sort of gain from bad behavior, would just magically want to stop misbehaving because a teacher was nice to him or her. It doesn't work that way! It never has and never will. The only thing that stops bad behavior from having power is when doing it costs more than not doing it, period. Also, for those people who are so "hornswaggled" by the thought that bad behavior is a purely emotional, thing that needs lots of talking, I will beg to differ with them too. Misbehavior is usually about patterns and power, not emotions. This is a huge misconception that prevents many adults from taking the right steps quickly. If you think about misbehaving as an emotional reaction, of course you want to coddle and protect the child. If you look at the misbehavior as a pattern of doing the same things and having nothing stop you from doing it again, that feels pretty powerful and it is done again and again.

It doesn't matter why you misbehave. You can and should deal with feelings later, after the appropriate structure and discipline. What matters is does the misbehavior get the child power? Does the misbehavior get the child attention? Does the misbehavior get the child out of something uncomfortable? Those are the things that adults should be thinking about. Not is this child having a tantrum because of some underlying emotional problem and then letting it go because of feeling bad about that. That is one of the most irresponsible things I can even think of for an adult to do. Identify the problem, set the limits and then do the talking, after the child knows where the line is.

The faster an adult can use appropriate discipline for a misbehavior, the better the learning and the more permanent the change for the child. When misbehavior is allowed to go on, while gaining all kinds of positive attention for it, it is becoming a permanent habit.

I applaud your follow-through and your commitment to your child. Your child will also thank you later on (don't expect that now though.) Based on all the parents I have seen coming in the last few years with the same story as you, I believe that parents are just going to have to push their agenda to get the daily feedback they need to be able to appropriately structure their child's behavior. It's funny how these school personnel talk and talk and talk to these misbehaving kids and coddle, coddle, coddle and nothing changes in terms of behavior. But, just one time that child does some sort of appropriate consequence after school and all of sudden, you see a different child. A child who can all of sudden control him or herself, because it means something now! Believe me, I have watched it happen over and over again. Many parents tell me that they couldn't believe that it was that simple to change it. You do need to make sure that your discipline is appropriate and not abusive. If you need more detail, you can call. You already know how I think, but there is a lot more I can teach you.

Just keep on plugging and don't expect to get the "powers that be" in line with your way of thinking.

device swings over the second room where a cardiologist is ready to begin.

The lab benefits both patient and doctor. For example, a patient recently was brought to the lab from the Emergency Department after being treated for chest pains. He needed an angiogram to detect whether there was a blockage in the coronary arteries. When a blockage was discovered, balloon angioplasty, and interventional procedure to open the blocked artery and allow blood to flow, was immediately performed. The quick action may have prevented a heart attack.

"We can swing the device over and eliminate 15 to 30 minutes of turnaround time," said Chuck Rosenberg, Manager of Cardiology Services. "We can do 12 procedures comfortably in an eight-hour day. It gives us flexibility and more productive use of our resources, which benefits our patients and the doctors."

Rosenberg added that Condell is one of the first hospitals in the country to have this equipment from Philips Medical Systems. It's a state-of-the-art upgrade. Philips sent in technicians from Denmark to install it."

Charity holds annual fund-raising ball

Assistance in Healthcare will be holding its 15th annual charity ball in February. The not-for-profit 501 (c)(3) foundation provides grants for the non medical expenses for cancer patients in need.

The Sweetheart Ball, scheduled for Feb. 17, features a dinner/dance and a silent auction that acts as the major fund-raiser of the year for the charitable organization. Each year, the event receives community and business support in the form of donations of items for the silent auction, sponsorships for the event and/or cash donations.

"In the past we've had donations of traditional ethnic dinners, jewelry, cases of wine, and autographed memorabilia. Some are even donating time in their condo or vacation home," said Sandy Grasser, patient advocate at Midwestern Regional Medical Center and patient liaison to the Foundation.

The event also features a special "capsule table" of smaller items.

Another theme at the ball is the 50/50 raffle. Each guest wishing to participate in the 50/50 raffle places $20 in an envelope. As they turn the envelopes in, the money is counted and their named is placed in the hat. The lucky person whose name is drawn from the hat receives half the funds collected in the raffle.

The main sponsor for the event, scheduled this year at the Country Squire in Grayslake, is Cancer Treatment Centers of America at Midwestern Regional Medical Center. Businesses and organizations wishing to help by sponsoring the charity event are still being accepted.

Last year's Sweetheart Ball raised a record $50,000 with more than 300 attendees. Throughout the year, an average of 25 patients or patient's families per month were helped by the funds raised.

Any party donating items, seeking to sponsor the ball or wanting reservations for the event can call Carol Lulinski at 872-6302, Barb Albert at 872-6462 or Marlene Bloxsom at 872-6311.

Danger above! Snow enemy of Lakeland roofs

The 40-inches of snow that fell in the Lakeland area last December has caused roofing problems

By PATRICIA L. JOHNSON

The National Climatic Data Center, NCDC, reports the annual snowfall for the Lakeland area as 37.6". This average is based on the amount of snow that has fallen yearly over the past 39 years.

With this figure in mind it's not surprising that the 40 inches of snow that fell during December 2000, combined with the cold temperatures, has caused major roofing problems for Lake County homeowners.

Two separate problems arise from an abundance of snow on a roof. The first problem is that snow is heavy. Calculating your roof's snow load capability is a complicated process. It begins by determining your roof's dead weight, which is the weight of all roofing materials including sheathing, roofing paper, felt and shingles. Added to that figure is the weight of any new layers of roofing material added to the original roof. Let's assume that your home was originally designed to carry 10 pounds of roofing material per square foot. If you have added any additional roofing material, the snow load capability of your roof is then decreased by the added weight of the newer materials.

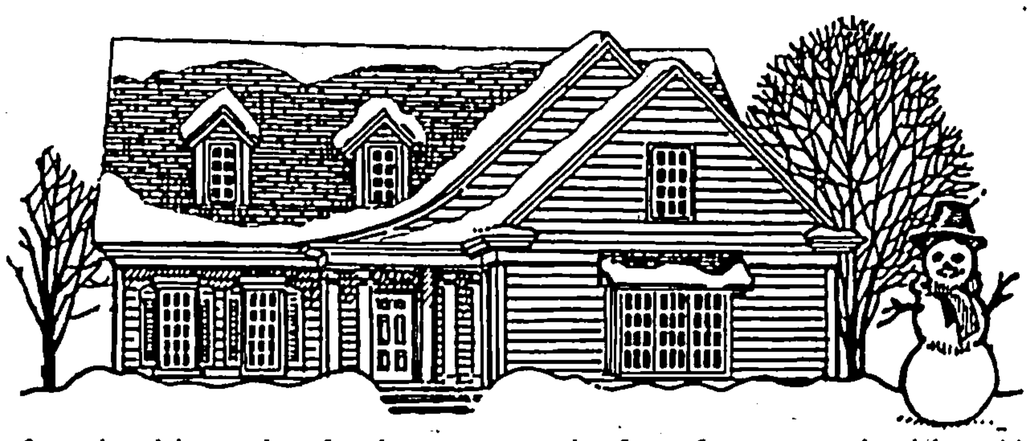

Snow rakes are the most common means of removing snow from roofs and may usually be purchased in a variety of sizes. unfortunately, many stores are experiencing stock shortages due to the tremendous amount of snow that has fallen.

Actual weight of snow varies depending upon water content and is measured in terms of water depth at 5.2 pounds per square foot. A very dry snow has water content of 3%; compacted snow has water content of 20%, while ice has water content of around 100%. A roof designed to carry a snow load of 40 pounds per square foot should be able to support approximately 3'6" of compacted snow.

Snow buildup on a roof that is not structurally sound can cause the roof to cave in and crush a house. An expert home inspector, roofer, carpenter, contractor, architect, or engineer should be able to help you determine how much weight your existing roof can support.

Water drainage is the second problem caused by snow packed roofs. The heat in your home rises melting the snow touching the roof and turns the snow to water. When the weather is cold, as it was last December, with an average daily temperature of 19 degrees, the melting snow freezes again when it reaches the eaves. This ice buildup creates a dam on your roof, with nowhere for the melting snow to drain. Eventually the water finds a way into your home, either under the shingles to the ceiling or down the walls.

The immediate solution is to break the ice dams that have formed on the eaves and this can be a very costly project. Sammy Biggs, owner of Correct Roofing and Construction, in Ingleside, estimated the cost of $45-$50 per hour, per man. Obviously, the cost is going to vary depending upon the depth of the ice that has formed, and the number of workers assigned.

Sammy estimated that removing snow off the roof using a combination of shovel and snow rake, cleaning the walkways, and removing the ice, until flush, from the gutters of a 2000 square foot house would cost around $500-$600. Shingle damage is a primary concern to Sammy and his crew. If the ice has frozen the shingles to the roof, it's very easy to damage the shingles. Sammy has found that using a 2 1/2 pound sledgehammer loosens the ice without causing shingle damage. Sammy also finds that an ice ace, similar to those used by mountain climbers, is useful in breaking the ice buildup.

Debbie Roland, and her husband Barry, own Roland Roofing in the Round Lake area. Roland Roofing does not have set fees for snow and ice removal, as this is the first year that their company has been involved in that process. Each job is individually estimated based on the various factors involved, including the size of the home,t he amount of snow, the depth of the ice, etc.

The Roland's have been swamped with orders for roof snow removal and the waiting period for this service is now running around six weeks. A major factor in the waiting period is employee safety. If the Roland's do not feel that working conditions are safe, they will not send their employees to the job site until the working conditions have improved.

Tom Edgman, owner of Plows Unlimited located in the high Sierra Mountains tells us that "snow on roofs has been a problem here in the high Sierras for as long as there has been houses". In that area of the country, workers go up on the roof with saws and physically saw the snow into large blocks that can then be pushed off the side of the houses. Tom suggests using an ice saw to cut notches in the ice dam so the water can drain as a temporary solution and recutting the notches as necessary. As a permanent solution Tom suggest having electric heat strips installed on the eaves to prevent the ice dams from forming.

Although electric heat strips have been considered hazardous in the past, with proper installation they prove to be a safe, economical and permanent solution to a serious problem facing homeowners.

Tips for painting water-stained areas

This time of year, homeowners often have problems with water stains appearing on ceilings, walls and woodwork. Water from melting ice, snow and rain seeps inside from insufficient flashing around windows, skylights, dormers and chimneys, and from ice dams forming in gutters and along roof edges.

Some may think all that is needed to hide these stains is a fresh coat of paint. However, water stains are resolubilized by the water in latex paints and will bleed through even multiple coats and ruin the paint job.

According to Wm. Zinsser & Co., a manufacturer of problem-solving primers and specialty paints, it is best to prepare water-stained surfaces with a "first coat" of a shellac-base primer before applying the finish paint. The shellac resin in Zinsser's B-I-N Primer-Sealer forms an impermeable film that permanently seals off water stains. Unlike resins found in latex and oil-base products, shellac also seals out musty odors that can accompany such stains.

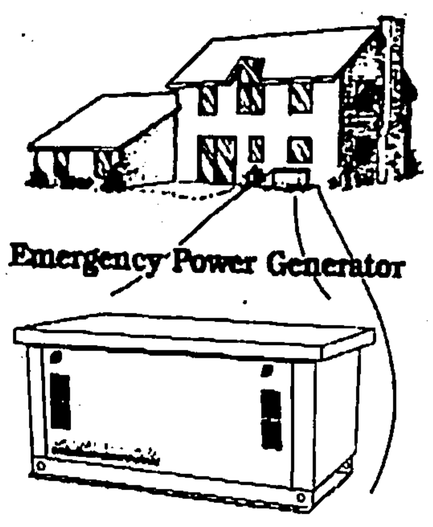

Easy to use, the primer contains an alcohol solvent, so it dries fast — ready for topcoating in 45 minutes. Unlike oil-base products, it leaves no lingering paint smell, as the alcohol dissipates very quickly into the air. And, brushes clean up easily in a solution of household ammonia and water, so there is no need for mineral spirits.

The primer can be used under all latex and oil-base topcoats. It comes in a white-pigmented formula that can be tinted by your retailer to match the color of the finish paint. It is available at hardware stores, home centers, and paint and decorating outlets in traditional pint, quart and gallon sizes. It also comes in a handy aerosol for covering water stains on acoustical ceiling tiles. A virtual match for Armstrong ceiling white, B-I-N will not ruin the acoustic properties of the panels.

Are the best mortgage rates online? Experts offer advice

The Internet has given many consumers the impression that it can do everything a traditional, retail business can do, except that it can do it faster, easier and for less money.

Just compare the price of a book online versus the same title at the mall. Check out the price of an airline ticket on the Web versus one bought from a travel agent. Look at the interest rate for that e-mortgage versus the rates offered by local lenders.

Indeed, interest rates for home loans on the Web do look pretty appealing at first glance. So, Mundelein-based Majestic Mortgage Corp. decided to find out whether the Internet really does offer the best deals.

Its research makes a case that the savings Internet lenders claim to offer are nominal, and the case for using a traditional lender is made even stronger when those sometime savings are held up against the services and advice of a real-life mortgage broker or banker.

Majestic's cost comparison of online lenders versus traditional lenders focuses on APR (annual percentage rate) rather than interest rates.

While interest rates determine the monthly payment, APR factors in additional upfront costs like points and loan origination fees. (APR does not include all costs — title insurance, for example, is excluded from the APR calculation. Other fees, like express shipping charges, might be excluded too).

'A mortgage might offer a very low interest rate, but the APR can be much higher. That's because the borrower might be required to pay thousands of dollars in upfront fees to obtain that low rate.'

Tom Ward
president of Majestic Mortgage Corp

The federal government requires all lenders to use the same formula to calculate APR, and it requires lenders to disclose APR, as well as other loan payment information.

"APR sorts out the real quotes from the lowball quotes," said Tom Ward, president of Majestic Mortgage Corp. "A mortgage might offer a very low interest rate, but the APR can be much higher. That's because the borrower might be required to pay thousands of dollars in upfront fees to obtain that low rate."

For example, one Internet site Majestic Mortgage researched touted a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage at 6.75 percent; however, fees for that mortgage were $5,665 for a $150,000 loan.

"When we compared that loan to a loan at 8.00 percent, with no origination fees or points and an APR of 8.066 percent, we found that a borrower who opted for the 6.75 percent rate would need almost four years to make that rate pay for itself," Ward said.

"This is not to say that the use of points and loan origination fees should be discounted entirely," added Ward. "But, the above example illustrates why it is important to look beyond interest rates."

For the comparison, Majestic evaluated 30-year, fixed-rate conventional mortgages of $150,000 at an interest rate of 8.00 percent. Lock terms, which determine when a buyer locks in the rate — and affect the cost of the loan — were identical.

Space, choice, value foremost considerations

Bill Gronow of Kennedy Homes asks the question, What is "value"?

In housing, he says, "the value of a home means what it's worth to the home buyer, and that varies from person to person. Everybody has their own set of ingredients, but usually they will include not only the price of the home, but also its location and amenities. Part of it is the home's affordality — the price paid per square foot. In many cases, space and choice are part of what make up value.

As for the space, that can also vary. "While most often it means how much room there is in the home, it can also be defined by perceived space — how open the floor plan feels — and by the amount of space outdoors surrounding the home.

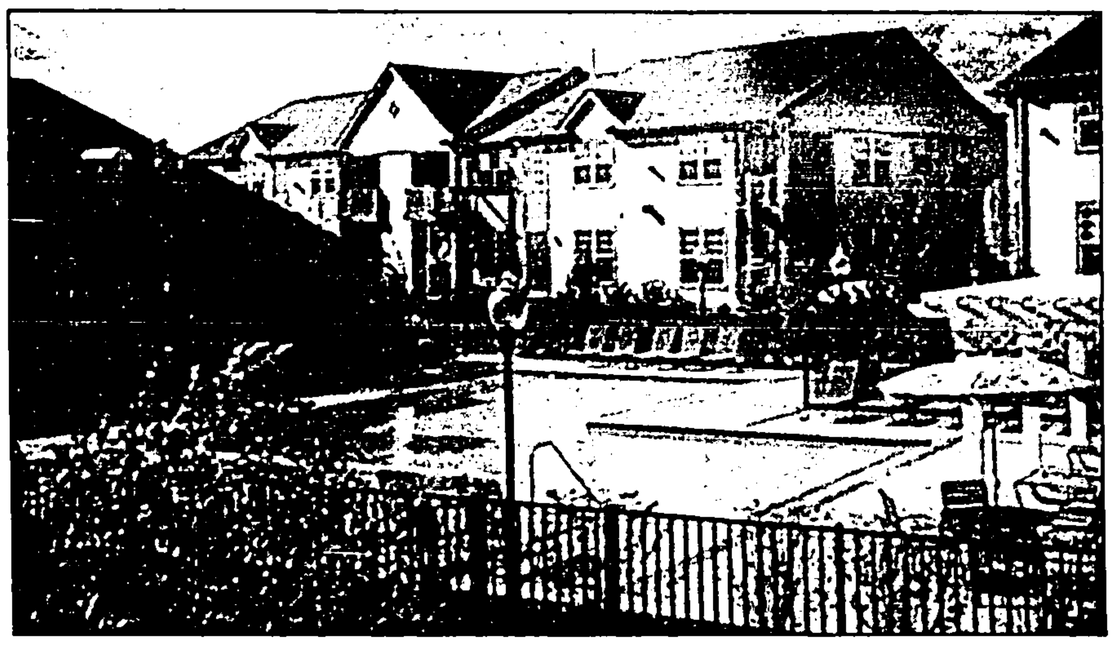

"We reviewed all of our floor plans to maximize the amount of living space. We found that, in most cases in this area, people would rather have the extra floor space than a volume ceiling, and as a result a lot of our plans were redesigned. We now are able to offer homes boasting well over 3,000 square feet at prices well below $100 per square foot, depending on the community," stated Gronow, Kennedy operating partner.

All of the floor plans at all Kennedy communities feature basements (except Farmington Fields and Tiffany Farms, where they are an available enhancement), two-car garages, wall-to-wall carpeting, insulated metal exterior doors, insulated windows (with screens, per plan) insulated patio doors and poured asphalt driveways.

Kitchens are equipped with either gas or electric ranges with continuous-clean ovens, dishwashers and double-bowl sinks with waste disposers. Many of the plans can feature center work islands. Baths feature one-piece cultured marble vanity tops; most master baths boast luxurious soaking tubs and separate showers, all have walk-in closets and offer his-and-hers vanities.

Available custom choices (depending on the community and the plan chosen) include air conditioning, six-panel or stained interior doors, brick exteriors, wood-burning or direct-vent fireplaces, ceramic tile and wood flooring, nine-foot first-floor ceilings and second-floor volume ceilings, first-floor dens or home offices, three-car garages, sun rooms, screened porches, whirlpool tubs and skylights.

Buyers may also add a first-floor in-law bedroom/bath arrangement, den or home office, or a sun room or screened porch; they may add windows or closets, select alternate room layouts, add or change lighting fixture locations, change the angle of the garage entrance (if the site permits), and choose from a variety of exterior building materials.

Luxury units plus amenities

Apartment complexes with amenities like swimming pools, clubhouses with kitchens, business centers and exercise facilities are gaining favor in the Lakeland area. One and two bedroom units feature nine-foot or vaulted ceilings, walk-in closets, full-size washer/dryers, multi-line cable and phone outlets, gas fireplaces and state-of-the-art kitchens. Rents for one-bedroom units typically start at $925 per month; two bedrooms can be rented at $1,190 per month or more.

More than meets the eye

Most homebuyers and sellers order a home inspection before the home exchanges hands. While this is a common practice, not everyone understands the home inspector's role. "The home inspector can be held accountable, by law, for checking all conditions that are visually discernable," said Fran Broude, regional vice president, Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage. "Specifically excluded from an inspection are conditions concealed from view, such as electrical wiring contained within walls and foundations."

To inspect those hard-to-see elements, consider using additional experts:

•Electrician. Home inspectors will only test the functioning of electrical outlets. Electricians can measure required amps for each room and make sure the circuit breakers work.

•Foundation expert. Since the home inspector is not responsible for problems relating to the landscape around the home, it's a good idea to hire an expert to check the foundation. They can investigate key areas around the home to locate defects such as cracks or leaks leading to a faulty foundation.

•Plumber. They can examine any problems that may occur due to erosion of pipes, leaks or backup problems within the home's plumbing system. Since some pipes are not visible to the home inspector's eye, this plumber can identify underlying problems.

CRIMESTOPPERS

Crime of the week

Crime Stoppers and the Lake County Sheriff's Police are seeking information regarding a Medical Waste Spill that took place in Long Grove. Around Dec. 28, a Medical Waste Spill took place on Hicks Rd. (IL53) in Long Grove by an unidentified transport hauler.

Hicks Rd. was closed for more than six hours while environmental clean-up crews removed the medical debris from the road and the adjacent earth shoulder. The state is seeking reimbursement of the clean-up and disposal costs that are nearly $50,000, and could possibly reach $100,000 before completion.

The Lake County Sheriff's Police discovered the used syringes, needles, and bandages that had been spread along a 200 yards stretch of Hicks Rd., north of Lake Cook Rd. in Long Grove, the morning of Dec. 28. The debris had been scattered by traffic and emergency snow removal operations.

Illinois Department of Transportation (IDOT) and Lake County Emergency Management Agency officials believe that the medical waste containers were being transported from a hospital or clinic to a disposal facility when several containers fell from the transport vehicle onto IL53. Investigators continue to examine the waste material looking for information regarding the identity of the source or the waste transport hauler.

Hicks Rd. is heavily traveled; and, both state and county officials hope witnesses to the spill will call Lake County Crime Stoppers at 662-2222 to identify the transport hauler.

Citizens are reminded, the information they furnish Crime Stoppers is confidential and that they remain anonymous, with no pressure to reveal their identity. Callers are furnished with a secret coded number which is used in following up on the information they turned in. The secret coded number is also used to collect their reward.

Anyone with information about this incident, any other crime or other felony crime or felony fugitive, contact Crime Stoppers at 662-2222. If the information leads to an arrest the caller could be eligible for a cash reward of up to $1,000

Crime Stoppers wants your information-NOT your name.

Performing artist to present one-woman show at CLC

Dr. Sharon Willis, a soprano, composer, recital artist and voice teacher, will present a one-woman show titled "When I Was in Africa" at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. Feb. 16 in the Mainstage Theatre of the Grayslake Campus. She will portray four characters from the 18th century to the present day.

Dr. Sharon Willis

Willis holds degrees from the University of Georgia (Doctorate in Vocal Performance); Georgia State University (Master of Music in Theory); Scarritt Graduate School in Tennessee (Master of Church Music, Conducting); and Clark-Atlanta University. As a composer, Willis has written many spiritual arrangements, Afrocentric dramas and short plays, classical arts songs, and poetry.

She performed in her first opera, "The Opera Singer," which premiered last April as a celebration and tribute to the 19th Century African-American prima donna Matilda Sissieretta Joyner Jones, known as "The Black Patti." In addition to performing and composing, Willis manages a private teaching studio of professional voice students, many of whom perform with her on concerts.

The program is sponsored by the Black Student Union. Tickets for the 10 a.m. show are $4 for the general public and $2 for CLC students and alumni, and for the 7 p.m. show tickets are $5 for the general public and $3 for CLC students and alumni. Call the box office at 543-2300 for tickets.

Salty diet can be deadly for trees

Just as a high-salt diet can be harmful to people, salt intake by trees and shrubs can also mean trouble. This winter, local greenery has already gotten a particularly high dose of salt, due to the record snowfall that buried the area in December.

"Now that the snow and ice are melting, you can actually see how much salt there is," said Joe Engberg, technical services coordinator for Hendricksen the Care of Trees. "Often, you see piles of salt on sidewalks and streets. This can be a problem for trees and shrubs."

Whether salt is applied directly to the soil, washes into the soil or blows onto plant stems and leaves/needles in a spray, it can harm or even kill a plant. Salt effects plants by upsetting the normal water balance in the soil or foliage, drawing moisture away from the plant. The principle is the same as the old-time practice of using salt to dry meats. By packing meat in brine, moisture is pulled out of the meat and into the strong salt solution.

With trees and shrubs, affected foliage dries out and turns brown. Roots dry out and cannot absorb water from the soil - even if adequate moisture is present. Once salt injury has occurred, it is difficult to remedy. But Engberg has some tips for protecting your plants.

o Watch for warning signs in early spring. If grass along a sidewalk or street is brown when other grass around it is green, there could be well excessive salt in the area.

o Watch for salt build-up near the root zones of susceptible plant species. (Remember that the root zone extends at least as far from the base of a tree as the branches do.) Trees that are particularly sensitive to salt damage are alder, hackberry, hawthorn, linden, red maple, sugar maple, pin oak, redbud, arborvitae, Scots pine and Norway spruce.

o If salt-laden soil has thawed, douse the area with fresh water. This flushes the salt way from plant root zones. If however, the area is not thawed or is poorly drained - such that you've seen standing water there in the past - you may cause more harm than good by adding water and causing more salt to accumulate around plant roots.

o Apply gypsum to affected or vulnerable areas. Gypsum is a relatively inexpensive granular substance that you can simply toss over root zones to help neutralize the salt. While gypsum is best applied before the first snowfall, it can also be somewhat helpful when the soil begins to thaw. A general rule of thumb is to apply 10 pounds of gypsum per 100 square feet.

SCHOOL DIGEST

Carmel High School

Operation Snowball

Carmel's Operation Snowball is a daylong experience designed by teens for teens. It is a program which aims to educate teens on various aspects of alcohol and drug abuse, to enhance self-esteem, to build self-confidence, and to teach sound decision-making skills. The goals of the program include helping students become more aware of "self" by providing them with an open, caring atmosphere in which they can express their feelings and discuss their experiences. Operation Snowball takes its name from the idea that positive thinking and behavior can spread from person to person, growing as a snowball grows.

The program will take place on Saturday, Feb. 17 from 7 a.m.-11 p.m. at the Carmel campus. Students from other high schools will be able to attend provided there is space available. The cost is $18 and includes meals, snacks, T-shirts, and materials.

For more information, contact Marnie Holton at 327-6364.

African-American history month materials online

Materials regarding the role of African-Americans in Illinois history are now available on-line courtesy of the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency (IHPA), which created the materials and made them accessible for the observance of African-American History Month in February. The information, including text, period photographs and illustrations, is available on the IHPA web site at: www.state.il.us/hpa.

"Placing these materials on-line makes them accessible to anyone, especially students and teachers, who is interested in the important role African-Americans have played in this state's history," said IHPA Director Susan Mogerman.

"African-Americans in Illinois" begins with the arrival of the first Africans in Illinois in 1720, through the infamous "Black Codes," the abolitionist movement and the Underground Railroad, "The Great Migration" of the 20th century, the civil rights movement, and the election of African-Americans to key political offices for the first time. The section was written by Karen E. Everingham of IHPA's Education Services.

"Generations of Pride: African-American Timeline, A Selected Chronology" highlights significant happenings in African-American history from 1619-2001, including mini biographies and images of numerous African-Americans from Illinois State Historical Library.

"Elijah Lovejoy: Editor, Abolitionist" details the life and times of the Alton, Illinois newspaper editor who was killed in 1837 for the abolitionist views he championed in his newspaper. The section was written by Doug Dammon, an intern with the Illinois State Historical Library.

ATTENTION PET OWNERS WE DO NOT KNOWINGLY ACCEPT ADS FOR ANIMALS IN OUR FREE/ GIVE AWAY COLUMN.
If you must give up your pet, please consider these facts.
*Free animal ads suggest that there is something wrong with the animal, or that it has no value.
*Some people who respond to these free animal ads are not reputable and are more concerned about making a profit than the animal.
*Charging a fee to a potential pet owner confirms the responsibility of pet ownership for an entire lifetime of that pet. For more information, please contact the Humane Society.

How To Survive The Job Search

By Nancy Sakol

Q: My husband and I just moved here from the east coast after he was transferred with his company. Oh lucky me! While I'm sure life will never be the same as living out there, I am stuck and am trying to make the best of the situation. Since arriving, along with the stress of a new life out here, dealing with idiot builders and finding my way around this overly congested area, I am also having a difficult time finding employment. I gave up a great job out east where I was an Administrative Assistant to a corporate executive for the past 9 years and left with a salary in the mid 50's. Since coming to this area, I have found it impossible to find work in my salary range. Dropping my salary at this time is not an option as I have a strong belief that you shouldn't go backward in salary. Before moving out here I was told by many people how low the unemployment is out here and that finding a job was not that difficult for someone with my qualifications. I am working with a few employment services who are really not sending me out anywhere as though there is no work out here. I am starting to feel as though everything I heard from people before moving out here was just talk. I keep in close contact with the services that I have signed on with, yet I hear nothing. My neighbor told me about your column and I would appreciate any advice you could give. Thank you. D.N - (via email)

A: Welcome to Illinois . . . we are not the east coast. Poor you, you make it sound as though living out here were a punishment. I hope that attitude doesn't rub too many people the wrong way, especially those trying to help you seek employment. I can't think of many things that would make people help you less, then a bad attitude, besides of course, the possibility of topping it off with an insulting remark or two about the area they all live. Come down off whatever it is you feel the need to stand on, and wake up to reality. Along with the mid $50 salary that you received you also showed 9 years worth of employment to get to that stage. Your salary undoubtedly was a result of 9 years worth of merit increases and a cost of living out east that I am sure exceeded the Midwest. While you may not have had this click in yet; the market salary for the type of position you seek is going to vary from what you are used to. That's a given. You say that you keep in contact with the services yet you hear nothing . . . I would have to say that if you are registered with a few services, either you have selected the wrong services for you, or perhaps the "nothing" that you are hearing, is the "something" that you don't want to hear. What is coming in loud and clear to me is that you are firm in your salary requirements and therefore not flexible. If you have told them a figure that you will not flex from, chances are, you are passing up some wonderful opportunities that will not be presented to you due to your inflexibility. Rethink your inflexibility or the search can go on and on, adding to your stress which sounds more self induced. Good luck to you. P.S. I hope your builder doesn't read this column, before he finishes the work you need done.

Focus on restaurant careers

A Day in the Life

Owning a restaurant is a labor of love, and most restaurateurs work long hours. When an establishment is open only for dinner, the restaurateur usually starts the day in the late morning. There are a number of daily tasks to complete before the staff arrives. First, there is checking "the book," which contains reports from managers about whatever happens in the restaurant each night. The owner keeps tabs on things like items to be ordered, customer complaints, and staff scheduling conflicts, all of which are recorded in the book. She studies the accounting records daily and stays on top of the restaurant's financial situation. She may also take on duties like confirming reservations. Usually, she will also find time to glance through wine and food industry papers and read the restaurant review section in the newspaper. When the doors open, the restaurant owner must be dressed and ready to socialize until the last customer leaves. It is extremely important that a restaurant owner have exceptional name and face recollection. The most successful owners report that the majority of their clientele are regular customers. The easiest way to gain repeat business is by offering seemingly special treatment, and remembering a customer's name or favorite table is always impressive. The restaurateur acts as a host, chatting with his customers and making sure they are satisfied. Approaching customers while they are dining helps the owner check on his staff. While this may seem intrusive when done by waiters, restaurant patrons usually love to have the owner inquire about the food and service.

Paying Your Dues

Restaurateurs come from many walks of life, but mostly they have experience within the industry. A restaurant owner can be either a "backer" or an active owner. Backers provide funding to the active owners and entrust them to run the place. Very few people back restaurants as their primary occupation, since the sole job requirement is having access to large amounts of cash. The financial rewards of backing a restaurant can be great, as backers are the first to receive profits. For hands-on owners a good place to start is a college or school that offers a restaurant and hotel management program, but in fact most owners don't follow this formal educational route. Instead, most have paid their dues as waiters, bartenders, and managers, and it's always a plus if they have experience with bookkeeping and accounting, too. Before opening, the restaurant owner spends some time scouting a location. If he is interested in a space that didn't previously hold a restaurant, the owner has to determine whether the building can be affordably converted to restaurant use. Other market studies are usually done to determine what type of restaurant would work best in that particular community and location. When all of this has been figured out, the restaurateur must obtain financing, either through a backer or a bank. The owner then usually hires all the founding staff, seeks out wholesalers and establishes relations with them; and oversees the design of the restaurant, from decor to menu. Then comes the stressful task of procuring a liquor license. Most towns and cities allot only a specified number of licenses, and often the potential owner must negotiate a price from a business that is closing. When the doors open the owner's work is far from finished. Failure rates for new restaurants are high, and an owner must make sure that his establishment keeps pace with the times and consistently operates at a high level.

Associated Careers

Many careers can satisfy food lovers who don't want to commit their time and bank accounts to owning a restaurant. Waiters, bartenders, busboys, and hosts ensure that the front of the house is running smoothly. The majority of these jobs rely on tips instead of salaries, and so earnings are influenced by the season and night of the week. A restaurant manager runs the front of the house and acts on behalf of the owner in her absence. Chefs, sous-chefs and bakers need formal training at a culinary institute in order to be taken seriously in the food community. The chef is usually the heart of the restaurant. He not only prepares food—he also schedules the kitchen staff, creates and continually updates the menu, and often shops for finer ingredients himself. The wine steward is another important position in upscale restaurants, where she uses an extensive knowledge of wine to select the restaurant's wine list. Wine stewards will also sometimes host wine-tasting dinners to introduce their clientele to new labels. Catering is another venue for food experts who want more variety and a less complicated operation. Franchise owners can open a restaurant without having to worry about any decision-making, such as designing the menu or decorating the establishment. Other aspiring owners open bars or nightclubs.

Quality of Life

Two Years Out: More than three quarters of new restaurants fail in the first seven months, primarily due to poor cash flow management. Those owners who survive report feeling very stressed—every review brings tears of either joy or pain. At this time, restaurants are usually not showing big profits but are just remaining afloat. In these first years owners are working long into the night, and still anxiously awaiting the possibility of taking some time off.

Five Years Out: Most restaurateurs who've made it through the first two years are still working away. They begin to show profits at this time and have usually completely paid off their loans. A few look forward to buying out backers. Mostly, they are happy to be down to working only six ten-hour-days per week.

Ten Years Out: A decade into the business, restaurateurs spend much less time in the house. They have learned to entrust the late hours to general managers. The most successful ones pay surprise visits to the restaurant to safeguard the high standards of the kitchen. As always, they keep an eye on the books. The owners who flourish tend to hire the most inventive chefs and pay close attention to trends happening in the big cities.

Spring is the time to spruce up the home

As spring brings blooming flowers and milder weather, people everywhere will go through the annual spring-cleaning ritual of organizing house and home. But who wants to spend a beautiful day in the house doing chores when afternoons could be spent in the sun?

Creating a fresh, clean look for spring does not have to be expensive or time-consuming. Spring home makeovers can be fun and easy with a few key cleaning and decorating tips.

• A simple plan — If you do not plan anything, it is likely nothing will happen. Schedule time to complete projects around the house. When the time comes to get down to business, start with organizational tasks that will make the rest of the job easier. For example, make a place for everything and keep it in its place. Update your filing system to take the stress out of sorting mail and paying bills.

• May makeover — Take a good look at your home and decide which rooms could use a quick makeover. Futon furnishings make seasonal makeovers a breeze — just change the cover from a dark winter plaid to a pastel spring floral, and you are set for the new season. Futon covers and pillows come in a wide variety of fabrics, colors and patterns to highlight any style. Maximize space by using versatile futon furnishings to turn a den or three-season porch into a guest bedroom or home office. Coordinate the room's style by adding accessories like matching end tables or chairs. Put the finishing touches on the makeover by changing accessories like pictures, plants and lamps. Magnify light with a few well-placed mirrors to give rooms a bright and spacious atmosphere.

• Good clean fun — Now that the house is organized and updated, spring-cleaning is no problem. Simplify your work by putting things away after use, breaking larger tasks into smaller sessions and combining jobs whenever possible. Organize your time and cleaning supplies the way a professional would. Finally, take steps to keep the "spring-clean" look all season. Deep-clean the carpets, use runners and throw rugs in high-traffic areas, and thoroughly clean windows, draperies and upholstery. Don't forget — spring is in the air, so sit back and enjoy your spruced-up home.

Living Large — Whether you have an elegant living room or a casual family room, versatile futon furnishings bring comfort and style to any room.

For more information on futon furnishings or to locate a futon retailer near you, visit www.futon.org on the Internet or call (800) 327-3262.

Quick,easy driveway tips for professional results

Sealing your blacktop driveway is easy and will increase the beauty and value of your home while protecting your investment. However, preparation is a critical step that should not be overlooked or neglected. You can eliminate more than 90 percent of potential problems by following these simple steps.

Tips from the pros

1. Repair all cracks and holes the day before.
2. Turn buckets upside down prior to opening, to promote easier mixing (make sure that the lids are securely attached).
3. Beat the heat — applying the sealer in the morning hours allows easier spreadability and proper time to dry. If your driveway is more than 85 F, lightly mist the surface to cool down and aid in spreadability of the material.
4. Use a brush/squeegee applicator to apply seal coat, not rollers.
5. Brush sealer in a side-to-side motion. Start from your home and work to the street. This will hide imperfections and improve the look of your driveway.
6. Place empty buckets at the end of the driveway. This is the easiest and most cost-effective protection for blocking your newly coated surface.

For more information on getting the best results for your driveway, visit www.gardnerasphalt.com on the Internet or send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Gardner Asphalt, P.O. Box 5449, Tampa, Fla. 33675, Attn: Info Request # GA-1001.

40-50 million Americans suffer from the symptoms of allergies

One of the major causes of illness and disability in the United States are allergic diseases. There are approximately 40-50 million Americans, 15 million of which are stricken with asthma, who suffer from the symptoms of allergies. Dust mites feces, dust, mold, animal dander and pollen are just some of the common substances that cause allergic reactions in their victims. However, these reactions are often not immediate and in fact, according to most allergy physicians, breathing airborne allergies is a cumulative problem.

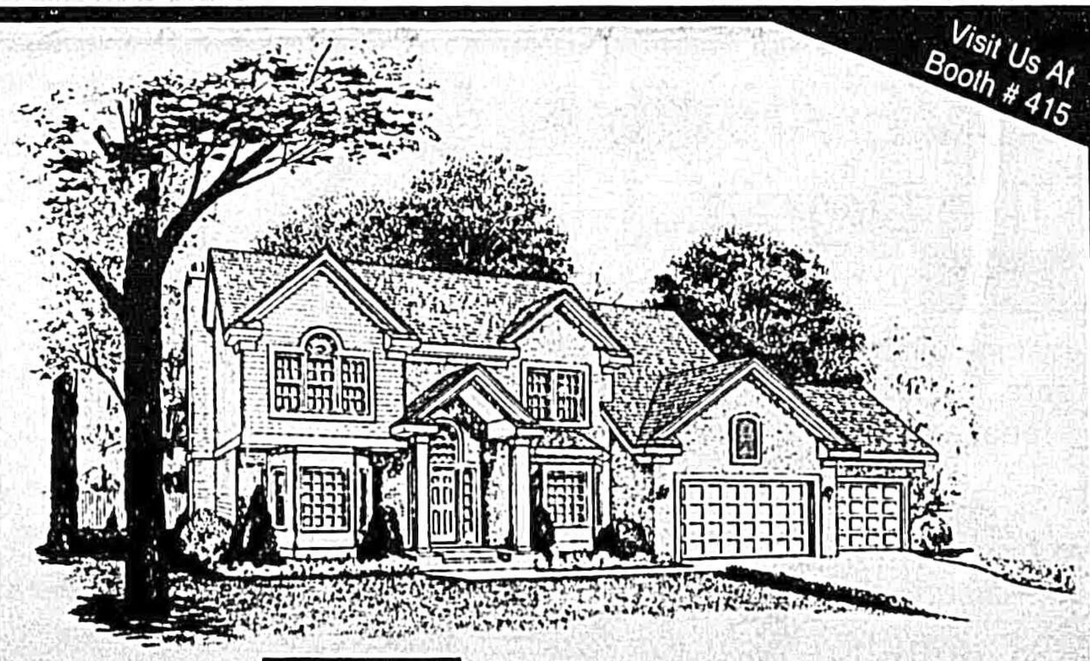

This approach to allergic reactions can best be described as the "Bucket Theory." Think of the immune system as a bucket. As we breathe, we take in allergens and our "bucket" begins to fill to the point of overflowing. At this moment, our immune system can no longer ward off the impact of the allergens, and the symptoms appear —runny nose, itchy watery eyes, sneezing, and an overall sense of feeling terrible.

If people could rid their bedroom of dust mite allergens alone, they could get eight to ten hours of purified air...

Vacuum Mart, Inc.

Using specific products will help those with allergies avoid their buckets from "overflowing." If people could rid their bedroom of dust mite allergens alone, they could get eight to ten hours of purified air, thereby giving one's system a chance to recover and begin the day with an "empty bucket." Start with your bedroom, then attack the rest of your home.—Copy provided by Vacuum Mart, Inc. of Libertyville, Illinois

The spring thaw is here:
Tips for painting water-stained walls and ceilings

This time of year, homeowners often have problems with water stains appearing on ceilings, walls and woodwork. Water from melting ice, snow and rain seeps inside from insufficient flashing around windows, skylights, dormers and chimneys, and from ice dams forming in gutters and along roof edges.

Some may think all that is needed to hide these stains is a fresh coat of paint. However, water stains are resolubilized by the water in latex paints and will bleed through even multiple coats and ruin the paint job.

Before painting over water stains, prime the surface with a shellac-base primer. This permanently seals off the stain so it won't bleed through and ruin the paint job.

According to Wm. Zinsser & Co., a manufacturer of problem-solving primers and specialty paints, it is best to prepare water-stained surfaces with a "first coat" of a shellac-base primer before applying the finish paint. The shellac resin in Zinsser's B-I-N Primer-Sealer forms an impermeable film that permanently seals off water stains. Unlike resins found in latex and oil-base products, shellac also seals out musty odors that can accompany such stains.

The primer can be used under all latex and oil-base topcoats. It comes in a white-pigmented formula that can be tinted by your retailer to match the color of the finish paint. It is available at hardware stores, home centers, and paint and decorating outlets in traditional pint, quart and gallon sizes. It also comes in a handy aerosol for covering water stains on acoustical ceiling tiles. A virtual match for Armstrong ceiling white, B-I-N will not ruin the acoustic properties of the panels.

For more information, call Zinsser at (732) 469-4367 or visit www.zinsser.com on the Internet.

Planning is the key to home fix-ups

Warm spring weather encourages homeowners to get outside and improve their homes. No matter who will be doing the work, a contractor or a do-it-yourselfer, proper planning is an important part of any home-improvement project. Contractors should be notified exactly as to what the homeowner wants accomplished. Homeowners need to meet with professionals, explain the work and get realistic estimates. Do-it-yourselfers also should plan ahead to ensure they have set aside enough time for the project, have the right equipment and materials and understand the work.

Having the proper equipment means having the tools specifically designed for the task at hand, but also having tools that are in good condition. If, when planning a project, do-it-yourselfers find that they don't have a tool they need, they can buy, rent or borrow it. Tools should be kept clean, dry and away from excessive heat.

With the proper planning and right tools and materials, people are well on their way to a successful project and a more beautiful home.

Ten Simple Steps for Home Safety

Every 15 seconds, a home, condo or apartment is burglarized in this country, says the Burglary Prevention Council. And, one-third of all burglaries are committed because homeowners forgot to lock their doors and windows.

"People need to know that burglaries can be prevented by paying attention to the simplest security measures combined with developing a greater alertness of their surroundings," says Tony DeMarco, spokesperson for the council.

To help safeguard the home against intruders, DeMarco and the Burglary Prevention Council recommend the following 10 steps.

1. Close and lock all doors when leaving. This includes garage or connecting doors.
2. Use automatic timers to give burglars the impression that someone is home.
3. Illuminate the yard area. The rear of the house should be lit to minimize dark spaces.
4. Lock up ladders or lawn furniture. These items could be used by burglars to gain entry.
5. Trim trees and shrubs surrounding the home. These areas serve as perfect hiding places.
6. Start a neighborhood watch program.
7. Use window and door alarms.
8. Take a complete inventory of valuables and place valuable jewelry and documents in a safety-deposit box. Videotape or take photos of all valuable possessions.
9. Don't allow strangers into the home and never leave service technicians or repairmen alone.
10. Never place keys under the doormat or flowerpot.Experience has taught burglars to check these places first when casing a house.

For a free 12-page booklet of safety tips, "Safe & Secure," send a self-addressed, stamped envelope, plus $1 for postage and handling, to the Burglary Prevention Council, 221 North LaSalle St., Suite 3500, Chicago, Ill. 60601-1520.

Set the dinner table for...63!

63 relatives fill Libertyville home during the holidays

Editor's note: Lakeland Media Feature Writer Nancy Krempely shares how she uses every corner of space in her home when 63 family members come calling for an annual gathering. Fortunately, Nancy has a sizeable home. Abundant space is a necessity to accommodate a large gathering comfortably. It is interesting how the various age groups sort themselves out in the Krempely home.

By NANCY KREMPELY

Visions of sugarplums dance in our head. Children are making lists and decorating the envelopes for Santa. Now, I'm not wearing a kerchief and Phil, papa, isn't wearing a hat, but, in the Philip Krempely house all the signs of Christmas are there, especially the 18 Christmas dinner invitations that have been sent.

Those invitations should net about 63 people coming to our house for a traditional Christmas family party.

For those of you who haven't entertained before, don't give pause at the number because, at least for me, this is a smaller number of guests than the first Christmas party I hosted after we returned to Illinois from Minnesota. Christmas of 1992 found me knee deep with 72 guests. Of course that was a little different then because at that time my children were 9, 7 and 4.

Now, the first question might be, who are all those people and why are you doing this? Phil, my husband is one of 17 children. Yes, they are all to the same parents. They all were born and grew up in Winthrop Harbor. Almost all live within half an hour of each other so holidays are nothing if not large.

When I married Phil I told him that I enjoyed entertaining and thought that dinner parties were especially fun. What is that saying? "Be careful of what you wish for, you might just get it." Little did I realize that one statement would be the defining aspect of our marriage. I have entertained this extremely large group in all seasons; before and after children; indoors and out; nine months pregnant and holding onto a toddler; and for all

Hello!

I hope you are enjoying Lakeland Media's official guide to the Lake County Home and Outdoor Living Expo.

Last year's Expo saw more than 10,000 people come to the Lake County Fairgrounds in search of new and affordable ways to improve their homes and increase their value.

Next month on March 2nd, Lakeland Newspapers will be debuting the NEW Home Marketer Monthly. The magazine will feature many of the stories, helpful tips, advertisers and exhibitors that you will find at Expo 2001 and in this guide.

Along with features on home improvement, Home Marketer Monthly will also feature listings by Lake County realtors on available homes throughout the area.

Although the Home and Outdoor Living Expo comes but once a year, Lakeland Newspaper's new Home Marketer Monthly comes each and every month.

Look for Home Marketer Monthly the first week of every month (beginning March 2nd) inserted into all eleven Lakeland Newspaper editions. I hope you enjoyed the preview.

Sincerely,

David T. Sherman

HOSTESS

the major holidays. But, those are other holidays, other parties and other stories.

How does one plan for a party of that size?

I have been told that these are parties, being catered affairs without the caterer. I have been given suggestions, by someone near and dear to my heart, Phil, to make lists, make timetables and where and how to place baskets, bowls or trays. I always listen kindly, but with so many years of experience I still do the preparations my way. It has gotten to the point where, other than timing the meat, I know instinctively when to start the appetizers, vegetables and potatoes. And, amazingly, without lists and timetables everything melds together at just the right moment.

From the first arrival at 2 p.m. to the last one leaving about nine hours later it is constant motion.

Most importantly is answering the question I get most often, "Is this whole day worth the effort?" Is it worth the two days of preparation? Is it worth rising at 4 a.m. to light the Weber for the turkey? Is it worth the spilled sodas, gravy in the dog's fir and a pile of trash in the garage? Is it worth the two days of clean up afterwards and the total exhaustion after the last guest has left? In a simple phrase, yes.

This day is the gift I give my husband Phil who treasures seeing his family more than they know. This is an undertaking that no amount of money could convince me to do for someone else. But, in doing a holiday I am able to give Phil a priceless gift. So, as toys wear out, sweaters go out of style, the memory and the photos of this day will be his for always.

The adult Krempley's gather around the dining table to socialize and catch up on old times.

Ample space enhances 'sorting out' process

In the living room there is a fireplace and picture windows and a piano. That is where most of the older adult conversations occur. The foyer has a winding staircase to the second floor. There is a 12 foot tree where the family gifts are placed and opened.

The dining room has a picture window, focal point where the oldest eat their dinner. The kitchen has banks of cabinets and countertops throughout with a cooking island in the center. The sink looks out over the breakfast area to the woods behind our house. Typically, the kitchen is a magnet for guests.

The family room has a fireplace and windows on all exterior walls. The French doors go to the deck and look out to the woods behind the house. This room is generally full of people also eating and watching sports.

The basement is 1,200 sq. ft. of finished space with an additional 1,200 sq. ft. unfinished. There is a bumper pool table and big screen entertainment system. Behind the game room is a stage.
